SHELLING ACTS AS SPUR AFTER FDR'S ADDRESS

President Warns of More Bad News To Come Just as Sub Attacks Coast.

ASKS 'GREAT EFFORT'

Roosevelt Calls For Production Without Interruption To Beat Axis Enemies.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt admonished the American people last night to prepare themselves for further reverses on the war fronts, and even as he spoke an enemy submarine was raking a spot on the California coast with gunfire

By the grimmest coincidence, the bombardment opened up just before Mr. Roosevelt reached that portion of his speech in which he declared that the nation also could expect to suffer continuing losses at the hands of Axis underseas raiders in both Atlantic and Pacific "before the turn of the tide."

To speed the turn of that tide, Mr. Roosevelt called for "uninterrupted production" to build up an overwhelming superiority of war supplies for the ultimate grand offensives of the United Nations.

The president's voice was sharp as he stressed the two words—"uninterrupted production."

Mr. Roosevelt was unaware of the California coast bombardment while he delivered his 35-minute radio address to the nation and to much of the world, but he said early in his talk that the battle ahead was "warfare in terms of every continent, every island, every air-lane in the world."

The capital was not unduly sur-

Mayor Mum On Crafton Successor

Locke Says He's Given No Thought to Training New Director.

Mayor W. J. Locke was certain today of only one thing in his strange dispute with Service Director C. M. Crafton over the latter's status—and that was that Crafton will be through in four days.

He hasn't selected a successor. Moreover, he hasn't "given any thought" as to how the successor, if there is one, will familiarize himself with his new job.

Asked today if he had selected a successor for Crafton as yet. Locke said that he had not but that he intended to take action late today or tomorrow.

When a News-Journal reporter inquired if Crafton would be kept on after the first of the month to help train the new director, Locke replied:

"I've already told you several times that Crafton will be through on Feb. 28."

"I really haven't given any thought to it," said the mayor, when asked again if he had considered retaining Crafton as a tutor for his successor until the new man could "learn the ropes."

Locke has maintained for the past three weeks that Crafton had "resigned verbally" and that the service director would be finished on Feb 28 Crafton has made public statements that he "never gave the mayor any cause to believe he had resigned" and that he will hold his office until he has received "official notice from the mayor" that he has been replaced.

The mayor said today that he was intending to give Crafton formal notice and that a formal resignation would have to be signed. Locke said he would not make any new appointment until this formal resignation is received.

Crafton when informed of the

Roosevelt Surveys World Situation For Talk

Just before he started his world-wide radio address last night, President Roosevelt posed for this picture in front of a huge map of the world—having previously urged his listeners to have either maps or globes before them as he spoke. The president warned that more bad news was coming, but that American and United Nations forces were growing and that "uninterrupted production" was a prime need if the Axis is to be defeated.

U-BOAT FIRES 25 SHOTS AT OIL REFINERY

Gunners Perform Poorly; U. S. Forces Launch Widespread Hunt For Submarine.

(By United Press)

SANTA BARBARA, Cal.—The sharp eyes of army and navy fliers and the keen ears of navy submarine detectors aboard surface vessels coursed a widening area of the Pacific today in a search for the submarine which shelled an oil refinery while President Roosevelt was addressing the nation last night.

The shelling, which caused little damage and no casualties, was from the two-five-inch guns aboard the submarine, presumably Japanese. Twenty-five rounds were fired at the Bankline oil refinery near Elwood, 12 miles west of Santa Barbara, according to a war department announcement from Washington.

From a position about one-quarter mile off shore, the submarine began firing at 7.20 p. m. Pacific War Time (10.20 EWT) and maintained its fire at intervals for about 25 minutes. Observers who watched it from shore in the twilight said it remained on the surface until after dark. They described it as very large.

An hour after the attack observers reported they saw flares above Santa Barbara channel. The Ventura county sheriff's office also said flares were seen near Hueneme, south of Santa Barbara. The Los Angeles FBI said it was not investigating these reports. It was presumed the flares were dropped by aircraft searching for the submarine

Ships Wrecked On Coast of Newfoundland

Vessels Run Aground In Heavy Gale, Are Dashed To Bits On Rocks; Residents Of Harbor Town Praised For Rescue Work.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The navy announced today that the American tanker Republic was torpedoed and sunk Saturday night by an enemy submarine in Hobe sound, 100 miles north of Miami. Some survivors have been landed at West Palm Beach, Fla. The navy did not disclose whether any lives were lost.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—A United States destroyer and a naval stores ship have been pounded to pieces off the rocky east coast of Newfoundland in a roaring gale, the navy announced today, with a loss of at least 189 officers and men.

Among the dead was Lieutenant Commander Ralph Hickox, 38, of Washington, D. C., who commanded the destroyer, the Truxtun, an old four-stacker of World war vintage. The commander of the stores ship, the Pollux, was not identified but the navy reported him safe.

The heavy loss of life was attributed to the fact that the two ships, constituting a portion of a convoy, were torn to wreckage under the merciless battering of wind and wave quickly after they ran aground.

The double disaster occurred in daylight but visibility was extremely low The frothy currents set up by the dashing of the waters against rocks and reefs, made the coastline indistinct and regular aids to navigation were obscured by low sweeping scud. The point at which the ships went aground was described as near the entrance to Lawrence harbor on which is located the town of Lawrence, Newfoundland.

Residents of that place were praised by the navy for their heroic efforts in pulling such men as survived through the ice storm tossed seas to safety.

The certain dead aboard the Truxtun were placed at seven officers and 90 men and there was a possibility that three more deaths would be confirmed later, the navy said. Dead aboard the Galion Woman, Hurt In Park Avenue Crash, Was County's 2nd Traffic Victim.

The first 1942 traffic death in Mansfield and the second for Richland county was recorded last night when Mrs. Amy Crider, 62, Galion R. D. 2, died at General hospital as the result of injuries received Sunday night in an automobile collision on Park avenue west. The traffic toll a year ago on this date was six.

Mr. Crider suffered a fractured rib and a puncture of the right lung when a car driven by her husband, Walter Crider, collided with another operated by Lewis Fellenbaum, Crestline, just east of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad overpass on Park avenue west.

Drive Cars Over Erie 'Ice Bridge' From Put-In-Bay

PUT-IN-BAY — (UP) — Nathan Ladd and Walter Smith reported today that they had driven their cars across the Lake Erie ice from Put-In-Bay to the main land near Port Clinton, the first time such a crossing has been accomplished in two years.

The men stripped their cars down to their chassis They made the trip to get meat because of a shortage on the island. They said the ice bridge was "fairly firm" and that they made the trip in two hours going and one hour returning.

Two years ago the "ice bridge" bore traffic from December until March.

Admiral Tells of Tests Given Ack-Ack Ammunition.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Admitting that he was "seriously concerned" over reports that some American anti-aircraft ammunition in the Far East was only 30 per cent efficient, Rear Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, chief of the naval bureau of ordinance, today told congress that this ammunition was tested only last year and found to be up to standard.

Blandy appeared at a public hearing of the house naval affairs committee which Chairman Vinson (D. Ga.) said was being held at the request of Navy Secretary Knox following a broadcast by NBC Commentator Martin Agronsky from Australia in which an American naval officer was quoted as reporting inefficient ammunition.

State Summons Second of 3 Contingents In Week For Physical Tests.

The second of three contingents comprising the largest group of draftees to leave Richland county in one week to date, went to Columbus this morning for Army physical examinations at Fort Hayes.

The first group left yesterday and the third will go to Fort Hayes tomorrow. Each unit is made up of approximately 100 men. Draft officials said many men in the groups were in the 1-H classification, in which men over 28 formerly were placed.

Officials pointed out that any claims for deferment on occupational or dependency grounds should be made with local boards before men leave for group examinations at Columbus.

Meanwhile, in a move designated to speed up expansion of the nation's armed forces, national selective service headquarters announced at Washington that henceforth registrants will be

Rubber Workers At Ashland Idle In Strike Dispute

ASHLAND — Production employes of the Faultless Rubber company, manufacturers of mechanical rubber goods, today staged a walkout in a strike called by the executive board of the United Rubber Workers union.

A union spokesman said that all unionists at the plant joined the strike, and that the other workers also participated. He said the plant's 300 production workers are 90 per cent organized.

The union spokesman, Edward Wertz, vice president of the local, said the strike was staged in protest to the dismissal on Feb. 4 of Harold Stafford, an employe with 19 years of service with the company. He said three conferences have been held to date with company officials on the matter, and that another meeting is scheduled.

Company officials could not be reached immediately for comment. It is understood the company is working on a limited number of government orders for items such as hot water bottles, in addition to civilian items.

No violence was reported as the strike started. Police said they would not go to the scene unless they were called in the event of disorder. While production workers remained outside, office workers, firemen, and watchmen entered the plant.

U. S. Rounds Up Stragglers In West as Deadline Falls.

SAN FRANCISCO—(UP)—Federal agents moved through 46 restricted defense zones on the west coast today to round up stragglers among 8,067 enemy aliens ordered to evacuate the areas.

Growing demands to clear even American-born Japanese from strategic areas were emphasized by the sudden appearance of a submarine, presumably Japanese, last night off the Santa Barbara county coast, where it fired 12 to 15 shells into an oil field. Aliens forced to migrate included 2,800 Japanese.

The deadline for evacuation of the districts expired at midnight last night.

Aliens who failed to observe the order were subject to arrest and internment.

READY: Java Girds To Meet Sea-Borne Invasion By Japs

BULLETIN

SOERABAJA, Java—(UP)—Two flights of 27 Japanese planes heavily bombed the Soerabaja area today in an effort to damage the only big naval base still in Allied hands in the East Indies.

(By Associated Press)

President Roosevelt's pledge that the United Nations would take the offensive "soon" aroused shining new hope in the anti-Axis lands today as defenders of Java girded for a climactic assault by Japan's sea-borne invaders.

In the first official disclosure that a sizable A. E. F. vanguard was already on the scene of action, Mr. Roosevelt declared that United States forces in the far Pacific were steadily growing and that "thousands of American troops are today in that area."

Other world-wide developments:

BURMA—London military quarters said the Japanese drive into Burma appeared nearing its maximum power and that the invaders were throwing fresh troops against British positions along the Sittang river, 20 miles from the Rangoon-Lashio railway.

Fighting stubbornly, British troops were forced to withdraw across the 30-mile area between the Bilin and Sittang rivers, but fresh Chinese reinforcements were reported streaming into Burma to

SPEARHEAD: Reds Threaten Main Nazi Route Of Retreat

(By Associated Press)

Russia's armies drove a spearhead against the heart of the German "escape corridor" from Moscow today, sharply threatening the main Nazi route of retreat with the capture of Dorogobuzh, only 15 miles south of the Moscow-Smolensk railroad, midway between Vyazma and Smolensk.

Dorogobuzh is 50 miles east of Smolensk, key German base on the Moscow front.

At the same time, the British radio reported that the Red armies had also captured the town of Pamno, 11 miles north of the beleaguered Nazi base at Rzhev which in turn is 125 miles northwest of Moscow, and guards the north flank of the withdrawing Nazi invaders.

Berlin several days ago reported heavy fighting south of Rzhev.

Adolf Hitler's field headquarters again gave a vague account of fighting on the long winter-bound front, asserting that "at various points, formations of the army and air force repulsed more enemy attacks."

German night raiders were credited by the high command with setting fires in the Russian fortress at Sevastopol, in the Crimea.

More than 14,000 Germans were declared to have been killed in recent Russian assaults which yielded numerous points on the

Treasurer Gets $5,618 In Taxes During 'Holiday'

Although most courthouse offices were closed Monday, in observance of George Washington's birthday which fell on Sunday this year, the treasurer's office did a record business collecting real estate taxes.

County Treasurer Charles Payne said that $5,618 was collected from the taxpayers who streamed through the office from the time it opened until it closed. This figure did not include the receipts by mail as the mail went unopened while customers were served.

Payne said he expects the real estate tax collection for the first half of 1941 to reach approximately $600,000. One-third of the amount, $202,951, has already been collected leaving a balance of $400,000 to be collected by March 20, deadline for the first half collection.

State offices also closed for the day yesterday along with banks and building and loan associations. City hall offices were opened with "skeleton forces."

SUGAR SHIP SUNK

7,000-Ton Freighter Sent To Bottom By U-Boat.

HAVANA—(UP)—The navy said today that the 7,000-ton American freighter Cofreci, carrying 50,000 sacks of sugar from the Cuban ports of Manzanillo and Jucaro, was torpedoed and sunk 60 miles off Cienfuegos Saturday night.

(There were conflicting reports in Havana on the ship's name. The nearest approach by Lloyd's register to the Cuban name was the 4,934-ton freighter Kofresi, owned by the Waterman Steamship corporation of Mobile, Ala.)

Navy Chief Diez Arguelles said no survivors had been found.

The sinking was the latest development in the submarine warfare in the Caribbean, where U-boats sank several tankers and shelled oil installations at Aruba and Curacao last week.

Mansfielders Urged To Sell Excess Sugar Back To Grocer

Mansfielders who have sugar hoarded in their attics may sell back their hoardings to retail grocers or to neighbors who don't have an adequate supply, according to a statewide plan announced today in Columbus by Courtney Burton, executive director of the state defense council.

Retail grocers, merchants, and chain store operators agreed at a meeting to pay householders the current retail price for sugar turned in for sale before rationing gets under way, Burton said.

Under the resale program, (1) householders may return sugar to independent retail and chain stores or sell to neighbors without an adequate supply; (2) grocers may pick up sugar at homes during regular deliveries, and (3) quantity users such as bakers and candy manufacturers may advertise their willingness to buy sugar from householders and indicate how it will be collected.

Eric Ferguson, director of the state rationing system, pointed out that householders must make a sworn statement of the amount of sugar on hand when they obtain sugar rationing books, perhaps within a month or six weeks.

"No one may obtain sugar when the rationing program starts un-

PLANES SEARCH FOR SUB AFTER COAST SHELLING

Jap Warcraft Fires 25 Rounds at Oil Refinery But Does Only Slight Damage.

1918, when a German U-boat lobbed shells at a Cape Cod objective with similarly trifling results.

An official communique of the 11th naval district revealed that the refinery of the Bankline Oil company of Elwood and the adjoining coastal oil field were its targets. It also revealed that the damage was slight.

The communique quoted the account of F. W. Borden, superintendent of the company as follows:

"At 7:10 p. m., one large submarine came to the surface about one mile offshore and fired approximately 15 shells from a deck gun.

"One direct hit was registered on a well, causing minor damage to the pumping unit and the derrick. There were several close misses on a crude oil storage tank and a gasoline tank.

"Apparently no damage was caused by these shells. A complete survey of the ground has not yet been made and there may be superficial damage. Whatever other damage is discovered will not be extensive.

"No fires were started as a result of the firing. No tanks were hit. From fragments of shell found and marks on the ground it is believed a four or five inch gun was used. The firing was done leisurely, apparently only one gun being used. It required about 25 minutes to fire the shells."

The shelling came at the end of a day marked by the forced evacuation of Japanese aliens from Terminal island in Los Angeles harbor and other strategic California areas where fifth column activities have been feared.

It was followed by a black-out which went into effect at 8 p. m. (11 p. m. EWT) 25 minutes after the last shell was fired. The black-out extended along the coast from Santa Barbara to Ventura, 30 miles to the southeast and was not lifted until 12:10 a. m. today (3:10 a. m. EWT). A number of Japanese aliens and Japanese-American citizens were found wandering in the black-out in Ventura and were arrested.

Police said two of those arrested were armed and were cruising in a blacked out station wagon. The men admitted visiting the Goleta area earlier, police said. No charge was filed against them.

Radio stations went off the air during the black-out. Their broadcasting of President Roosevelt's war report to the nation was not interrupted.

It was suggested by persons familiar with Japanese psychology that the captain of the submarine had deliberately chosen the time when the president was speaking to shell the coast. The speech had been widely advertised by radio yesterday and the submarine's officers undoubtedly knew of it.

A connection between the shelling and the German submarine activities against tankers and oil refineries on and around the Dutch island of Aruba in the Caribbean also was seen. A pre-arranged schedule of attacks against the American oil supplies of the United Nations seemed apparent.

It was the first report of Japanese submarine activity along the coast since Christmas day when an army bomber blew a Japanese submarine to bits.

'Biggest Sub I Ever Saw,' Says Worker

SANTA BARBARA, Cal. —(INS)— An eye witness who saw the enemy submarine rise from the sea and open fire on a shore-line oil field and refinery near Santa Barbara said today that the undersea craft was larger than any United States submarine he had ever seen.

"It was so big I thought it might be a destroyer or cruiser," G. O. Brown, oil field worker, told authorities. "I have seen many submarines and this was larger than any of those in the United States navy that I have seen."

Brown's description of the undersea craft prompted the belief that the vessel might have been one of Japan's giant long-range submarine cruisers.

The oil field worker said that the submarine shelled the refinery for 25 minutes with few shells finding their mark. Most of the shells exploded against the cliffs, the beach and on open fields.

Several missiles burst in a nearby pasture, Brown said, and two horses in the field raced about in mad frenzy.

Dozens of other persons witnessed the attack from shore. All agreed that the vessel was "as large as any we've seen in pictures."

Lawrence Wheeler reported that the bursting shells shook his roadside cafe and when he rushed to a window he saw a geyser of dirt shoot into the air less than a quarter mile away.

"One shell hit a well and blew the pumping plant and derrick to bits," he declared. "That was the only real damage they did.

"There must have been 20 or 25 men working in the field at the time. Nobody was injured."

approaches to a southwestern city —perhaps Kharkov — and continued fighting was reported about Leningrad.

Indicating Hitler is uncertain about the power of his Axis-touted spring offensive, Norwegian sources said the Germans were ordering 500,000 pairs of skis in Norway—preparing for another winter of fighting on the eastern front.

Nazi Radio Tells Of Big Red Drive

LONDON—(INS)—The London Evening Standard today published the text of a purported German radio broadcast announcing a gigantic Soviet counter-offensive and expressing grave fears over the fate of the German armies on the eastern front.

(Editor's Note: This broadcast was not heard by the International News Service listening post in New York but may have been carried on an unfamiliar wave-length.)

"The Russians have launched a tremendous counter-offensive," the broadcaster was quoted as saying.

Admits Increase In British Ship Losses

LONDON—(INS)—Great Britain has suffered "a most serious increase" in shipping losses in the past two months, the enemy has a "waning" command of the sea and air and the empire's margin of safety in the Far East has been "notably" affected, Prime Minister Winston Churchill reported to the house of commons today.

But, he added in the course of a long review again defending his captaincy of the war with a new and streamlined cabinet:

"We have a right to look forward across a good many months of sorrow and suffering to a happy and reasonable prospect of complete and final victory."

Initiating another "full-dress" debate at the end of which another vote of confidence in his regime will probably by asked, Churchill made no attempt to paint a rosy picture.

He did, however, intimate closer coordination in the Far Eastern theater by announcing that Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek has accepted an invitation to join the Pacific war council. Chiang already has been appointed commander of all United Nations forces operating in China.

Here are the main points of his address:

1—Admission that Britain has suffered a heavy increase in shipping losses and that the enemy has temporary but waning command of the sea and air in the Far East.

2—Announcement of Chiang Kai-Shek's participation in the war council.

3—Disclosure that the Japanese have 26 divisions in the American - British - Dutch - Australian area.

4—A warning that 'heavy and repeated' blows are still to come, along with "many hard and adverse experiences."

5—A prediction that Germany may go under "in the fourth or fifth year of the war" even though some nazi-conquered territories still lie under Hitler's thrall.

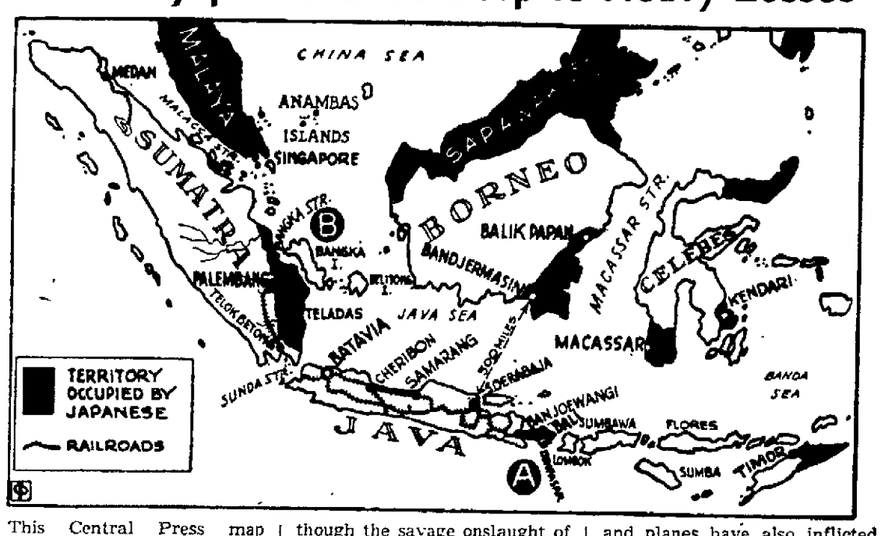
Where Japs Advance Despite Heavy Losses



This Central Press map shows the Dutch East Indies area in which the Japanese are reported continuing their advance despite appalling losses in ships and men. The Japanese have established a foothold on the island of Bali (A) though the savage onslaught of American and Dutch war vessels and bombing planes there has cost the invaders over half their invading fleet. The airdrome at Denpasar, chief port of Bali, has fallen to the enemy. United Nations ships and planes have also inflicted heavy losses on the enemy at Lombok, near Bali. The Japanese have lost 17 to 19 vessels, sunk or badly damaged in Bangka straits (B) where American and Dutch forces are putting up terrific resistance.

stem the Japanese onslaught.

A London spokesman said Japan had 26 divisions—at least 390,000 troops and possibly as many as 500,000—now fighting in the far Pacific theater and acknowledged that "we do not have so many."

DUTCH INDIES—Dutch and Allied troops were reported still resisting fiercely in Sumatra and Bali.

AUSTRALIA—Royal Australian airmen attacked Japanese-occupied Rabaul, New Britain island, overcoming Japanese fighter planes to bomb airdromes and shipping in the harbor.

Japanese planes were reported to have raided Allied shipping in the Sea of Timor off the north coast of Australia yesterday while R. A. A. F. airmen again attacked Japanes-occupied Rabaul, New Britain. A Canberra communique said the Australians had shot down one fighter and probably two others, while losing one of their own planes.

An all-out attack upon Java, heart of The Netherlands East Indies and nerve-center of the United Nations' southwest Pacific command, was regarded by Governor General A. W. L. T. Jarda Van Starkenborgh Stachouwer as imminent.

Japs Claim New Landing on Timor

TOKYO—(By Official Japanese Wireless)—(INS)—The Japanese imperial headquarters announced today that naval parachute troops effected a new landing near Koepang, Dutch Timor, last Friday and are now "smashing the enemy" on Timor island.

Imperial headquarters also claimed Japanese troops occupied Tandjoegkarang on southern Sumatra, four miles northwest of Oosmhaven on Lampoeng bay.

Commenting on American estimates of Japanese naval losses, the Domei (Jap) news agency said:

"The Japanese so far have lost four destroyers, with four others damaged, two submarines sunk and two submarines missing. Our transport losses have been exceedingly small."

(Editor's Note: American and other United Nations announcements have indicated beyond shadow of doubt that Jap naval losses are far in excess of those listed by Domei. In the battle of Bali alone an entire Japanese invasion fleet was left a shambles by American and Dutch sea and air action.)

til they have used or gotten rid of the excess" on hand, Ferguson said.

He said sugar on hand in excess of the two-pound limit would be deducted in stamps from the rationing books. Persons who make false statements regarding their supply of sugar would face federal prosecution.

Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, chairman of the Mansfield defense council, said detailed instructions on the new sugar resale plan were expected shortly by defense officials.

On another phase of the civilian defense program, Mayor W. J. Locke issued a proclamation designating the period from Feb. 23 to Feb. 28 as Home Food Garden Enrollment Week. The mayor and Kalbfleisch urged that all farmers and city and town residents as well in this area enroll in the National Victory Garden program, designed to increase the food needs of the nation's armed forces, America's allies, and the country as a whole. Anyone with a plot of ground, large or small, should plant a garden, Kalbfleisch said.

Lull In Fighting On Batan Continues

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— A strange lull continued today on the Batan jungle battlefront, as the Japanese invaders held to their positions and refrained for the second day from attacking Gen. Douglas MacArthur's little army of "eternal glory."

Behind the American-Filipino lines, however, Japanese planes dropped showers of incendiary bombs, a war department communique said.

"There was no activity of ground troops on either side during the past 24 hours," it was stated. Yesterday's communique carried the same report.

President Roosevelt in his speech last night paid glowing tribute to MacArthur's weary men crouching in the Batan foxholes and manning the guns of Corregidor fortress in Manila bay.

Germans Hear of U. S. Attack On Jap Isles

BERLIN — (German broadcast recorded by United Press)—A Tokyo dispatch today reported that an American naval force attempted to attack Japanese mandated islands in the Pacific last Friday.

(The United States navy in Washington has made no announcement of a second raid by American warships upon Japanese mandated territories in the Pacific.)

The Tokyo dispatch by the DNB news agency reported that Japanese planes "prevented" effort by a "strong naval unit" of the U. S. Pacific fleet to attack the islands.

given only a notice of induction instead of the present notice to report for physical examination.

Officials explained that the move would eliminate the present time lag between the time notice is given and men actually are inducted. However, in cases where this system would cause undue hardship, such men will be given an immediate furlough to adjust their civilian affairs.

In the past, men were given a week to ten days in which to wind up their affairs after they once passed the rigid army medical examination.

"Although the final physical examination by the army will continue to be the most thorough one given to registrants, the local boards will continue to give 'screening' examinations, rejecting the obviously physically unfit men," the announcement said.

Officials said that under the new procedure registrants will have the same rights of appeal and right of personal appearance before their local boards as they are allowed at present.

SHELLING ACTS AS SPUR AFTER FDR'S ADDRESS

President Warns of More Bad News To Come Just as Sub Attacks Coast.

prised to learn of the bombardment—indeed the likehood of such sporadic raids was foreseen in competent quarters here early in December when the first Japanese submarines appeared off the Pacific coast.

The immediate reaction was that such forays showed a poor understanding of American psychology, and that, instead of creating mortal terror, they would have the opposite effect of making the people fighting mad.

And a fighting mad people, many thought, would rise at once to the "prodigious effort" to which President Roosevelt summoned the United States last night.

"The task that we Americans now face will test us to the uttermost," the commander-in-chief declared. "Never before have we had so little time in which to do so much."

The president's address had both a somber side and an encouraging side.

The Axis, he reported, was exerting every ounce of strength, striving against time, in a supreme effort to destroy the lines of communications linking the United Nations, so that the Allies would be isolated and then conquered one by one.

The United Nations had been forced to yield ground and might have to yield more, he acknowledged, but he added:

"Actually we are taking a heavy toll of the enemy every day that goes by."

Specifically, he said, "To date—and including Pearl Harbor—we have destroyed considerably more Japanese planes than they have destroyed of ours."

Moreover, Mr. Roosevelt disclosed, American forces in the southwest Pacific battle theater were steadily growing.

Transportation difficulties had been immense, he said, "but I can tell you that in two and a half months we already have a large number of bombers and pursuit planes, manned by American pilots, which are now in daily contact with the enemy in the southwest Pacific.

"And thousands of American troops are today in that area engaged in operations not only in the air but on the ground as well."

This was the first official intimation that a sizeable vanguard of an A. E. F. was on the scene of action.

Turning to the debit side, Mr. Roosevelt discussed the situation of the Philippines in terms that left no room for optimism on the possibilities of reinforcing or relieving General MacArthur.

The turn of events there, he said, had long been anticipated.

"For forty years it has been our strategy—a strategy born of necessity—that in event of a full scale attack on the islands by Japan, we should fight a delaying action, attempting to retire slowly into Batan peninsula and Corregidor.

"Nothing that has occurred in the past two months has caused us to revise this basic strategy of necessity—except that the defense put up by General MacArthur has magnificently exceeded the previous estimates of endurance; and he and his men are gaining eternal glory therefor."

The president paid tribute not only to MacArthur's men, but to the fighting forces of the United Nations in China, in Burma and in the Indies.

He administered stern reproof to "the rumor mongers and poison peddlers in our midst" for "damnable misstatements" on American war losses, and he called attention to the promptness with which Axis propagandists seized on such material to encourage defeatism.

Mr. Roosevelt said that the consequences of the attack on Pearl Harbor had been "wildly exaggerated" in "weird rumors" of staggering losses.

Cautioning the people against placing stock in unfounded gossip of this character, the chief executive promised that the country would be kept informed on the trend of the war.

"Your government," he declared, "has unmistakeable confidence in your ability to hear the worst, without flinching or losing heart. You must, in turn, have complete confidence that your government is keeping nothing from you except information that will help the enemy in his attempt to destroy us."

While acknowledging the reverses suffered to date, Mr. Roosevelt had this to say "once and for all to the people of the world:"

"We Americans have been compelled to yield ground, but we will regain it. We and the other United Nations are committed to the destruction of the militarism of Japan and Germany. We are daily increasing our strength. Soon, we and not our enemies, will have the offensive; we, not they, will win the final battles; and we, not they, will make the final peace."

As proof of increasing strength, he reported that a careful survey of war production satisfied him that the nation would attain the 1942 goals he set on Jan. 6 when he called for 60,000 planes; 45,000 tanks; 20,000 anti-aircraft guns, and 8,000,000 tons of shipping.

For all Americans, the president set these three high purposes in the war effort:

"1. We shall not stop work for a single day. If any dispute arises we shall keep on working while the dispute is solved by mediation, conciliation or arbitration—until the war is won.

"2. We shall not demand special gains or special privileges or advantages for any one group or occupation.

"3. We shall give up conveniences and modify the routine of our lives if our country asks us to do so. We will do it cheerfully, remembering that the common enemy seeks to destroy every home and every freedom in every part of our land."

The president mentioned the "splendid counteroffensive" of the Russians as essential to United Nations strategy, and derided Axis propagandists who have said that the British are finished and that the Russians and Chinese were about to quit.

Japs Liken FDR to Irate Football Coach

TOKYO — (Japanese Broadcast Recorded By UP In New York)— A Domei news agency dispatch today likened President Roosevelt's Washington's birthday speech to a "pep talk by an irate football coach" and characterized it as a "fireside disappointment."

It said the speech was couched in generalities and offered only hope for a victory in the distant future.

It said a "noteworthy naval commentary to the speech was furnished by a report that a Japanese warship was shelling objectives on the American mainland at about the same time Roosevelt was pouring out his speech to the world from the White House."

Authoritative naval circles belittled the president's assertion that only three American warships were permanently disabled in the attack on Pearl Harbor. They said also that the United Nations' naval activities in the Pacific amounted only to a record of defeats without a single outstanding victory to date, "and they have utterly failed to send reinforcements to the Philippines."

What do I do?
—to prevent excessive wear on my car motor in winter?
Racing a cold motor is poison! It can put more wear on your motor in a few seconds than thousands of miles of normal highway driving. So when you start your car in cold weather, let it warm up gradually before driving. If you have a hand-operated choke use it sparingly. Too much choking dilutes the motor oil—reduces its protection against wear. In fact, a good all-around cold weather rule is, "take it easy."

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—Here is something that is not getting much attention, but it had better get it.

A few days ago selective service announced that labor leaders were subject to deferment from the draft as essential men in an industry essential to the prosecution of the war. I wrote a piece about that. It will stand another. There was not much hue and cry.

Gen. Johnson.

Next came a ruling that employes of the press and radio are also subject to similar deferment.

It is true that it was pointed out that this was no blanket exemption; that the final decision is in the hands of the local board to whom it must be proved that the industry is necessary in war production or for the national safety, health or interest; that what the man is personally doing is essential to its functioning and that there is no replacement supply.

But what good is that when Washington headquarters itself "advises" that the press, radio and labor leadership are essential to the national interest? That certainly takes away that particular decision, reposed by law in the local boards, and lodges it in headquarters.

The question of the individuals being essential isn't taken away in the same forthright language. But what is likely to be the reaction of the local board to the actual language that is used?

It is true that a case can be made out for a great artist or entertainer—that he amuses or distracts people and so, in a sorry season, takes their minds off things as unlovely as war and slaughter and starvation.

The best argument I ever heard made for that was made in World War I by Pavlowa in behalf of one of her troup. On that same day we heard that the great Fritz Kreisler had taken his precious fingers into the Austrian trenches as a simple soldier. What gratification we had in answering that telegram!

For there are no wholly non-essential industries. There is no indispensible man. The terms are purely relative. They change as war ebbs and flows. But the alternative to deferring one man is to take another.

The one taken goes to the imminent and deadly peril of his life and limb. It is true that the object of not taking the other is that you think he can make a greater contribution to victory at a lathe than with a rifle.

It is only in the government's interest that the man is taken—not in his interest. Yet he is further removed from danger than his fellow and, as things usually turn out, he is many times better paid.

No such terrible choice should ever even be considered, unless the nation's need for the man to stay at home is so clear, and the fact that he cannot be satisfactorily replaced so plain, that there is scarcely room for argument about it. It is grim and bitter business in which fear, favor or interest should have no part what ever.

William Green of AFL has denied any desire for them on the part of labor. We should like to hear the same from Sidney Hillman. On the contrary, he has pressed for them. Radio and the press would do well also to decline.

For these breaches in the foundations of one of the strongest elements of our national defense are the first . We can't let them grow without undermining their whole structure.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

I'VE just heard what I think will probably be the "Over There" of this war.

It's a spirited song with a really pretty, stimulating tune, and it's called "This Time." The words are, necessarily, pretty corny, as they are in most patriotic songs, but I find myself humming the melody after just one hearing. Irving Berlin is the composer, of course. You don't think anyone else is going to write the "Over There" of World War II, do you?

Kilgallen

Now is the time, in my opinion, for night clubs and hotel rooms to discontinue the policy of "no dancing except for those in formal attire." That was all right before Dec. 7 but now that we are all dashing about doing something useful, now that everyone seems to be either just off a train from Washington or just about to get on one, there isn't always the time to change into black tie or a satin gown when you snatch a couple of hours of relaxation.

These are times when a dollar-a-year man in tweeds and his date in her defense job uniform may be highly desirable, if not dressy, customers.

Some of those radio commercials in which the announcer yells furiously about what to buy for a headache are very effective. They give me a headache straight off . . . Not long ago I wrote something about men's "vests" and promptly received a scolding letter from a gentleman who sounded like a tailor. He told me that "vest" was a vulgar word, used only by pants pressers and street-corner loungers in the garment district that the prope noun was "waistcoat."

Well, I am a girl who has been familiar with the waistcoat for years, but I am also a great believer in common usage, and it seemed to me that "vest" was common usage, so I set out to check. Mindful of my correspondent's top-lofty slurs at ready made suits, I carefull selected from among my acquaintances only gentlemen whose garments are hand-tailored and in the $150-$225 group. I confronted them one by one and without warning asked: "What is that thing you are wearing under your jacket?"

To a man they gave me puzzled looks and replied: "That's a vest, dearie, as you very well know."

So I think I will continue to use the vulgarity until further notice by the Amalgamated Snooty Tailor's Association of America.

Ginger Rogers, typical white collar girl of the films, is looking anything but "white collar" in the niteries. Wearing a Spanish mantilla and two red roses in her hair, no less.

I notice the jitterbugs and autograph hounds who haunt the Paramount stage door have begun to use the side of the building on which to scribble memos, messages and assorted sentiments. The other day there was a large inscription reading "I'm just wild about Harry James," signed by a list of names from shoulder level to sidewalk level. Nearby, one contained this plaintive notice: "Dear Rita—I was here—and you weren't—now you're here—and I'm not—Irving" . . . I haven't ridden in one taxicab this week whose driver hasn't informed me of his status in the draft. Sure, I listen. I am interested in my fellow human beings.

I am informed that there is a popular new word along the Main Stem, pronounced "schlump" and rather difficult to define. It describes an individual said to be quite a common type on Broadway and elsewhere. You know the kind: going through a revolving door he's the one who doesn't push. If you approach an elevator when he does, he'll let you ring the bell. If you happen to be walking past a newsstand with him he won't look, but he'll ask you: "What do the headlines say?" . . . The young gentleman who walks the tightrope at the Versailles is an excellent slack-line artist, but it does seem a rather nerve-racking sort of an act to put in a nightclub. How can you relax when you are sure a blonde gentleman in white flannels is soon going to be an ingredient of your lemonade?

AGREE ON TERMS OF LEND-LEASE AID SETTLEMENT

U. S., British Officials Set Up Plan, To Be Effective After End of War.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Anglo-American agreement on broad principles for post-war settlement of lend-lease aid extended Great Britain was announced today by the White House.

Pointing out that it was too early in the struggle to foresee or define detailed terms of settlement, the agreement sent forth "fundamental framework" which included expansion of trade, elimination of discriminatory treatment in international commerce, a reduction in tariffs, and in general the attainment of the economic objectives of the Atlantic charter.

More specifically, it stated that articles which at the end of war can be returned to the United States, and which this nation wants back, will be returned.

Full account is to be taken of all reciprocal aid.

The agreement, signed yesterday by Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, and Viscount Halifax, the British ambassador, declared that the terms finally agreed upon "shall be such as not to burden commerce between the two countries, but to promote mutually advantageous economic relations between them and the betterment of the world-wide economic relations."

It was stipulated that the proposed Anglo-American post-war economic improvements were "open to participation by all other countries of like mind."

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that the rate of lend-lease aid to the other United Nations has tripled since Pearl Harbor.

Edward R. Stettinius, jr., lend-lease administrator, said in testimony made public by the state appropriations committee that during the first 8½ months of the program, such aid averaged about $141,000,000 monthly, compared with $338,000,000 in December and $462,000,000 in January.

JOB BENEFITS INCREASE HERE

January Payments From Office In City Total $57,650, Says Handley's Report.

Showing the effect of industrial unemployment resulting from the change-over from domestic to war production in Mansfield, unemployment benefits paid workers here in January totaled $57,650, an increase of 120.8 per cent over December, C. W. Handley, manager of the Mansfield office of the Ohio Employment service, reported today.

The Mansfield office received 911 new unemployment compensation claims last month and 787 new applications for jobs. The number of unemployment claims represented an increase of 15.3 per cent over the December figures.

The average weekly benefit check last month was for $13.61, slightly higher than the state average of $12.22. Handley said the better-than-average payments represent higher wages paid workers here when the industries are working full time.

The Employment Service center here placed 101 workers in jobs in January, 28.9 per cent fewer than in December and 61 per cent fewer than in January last year.

The Mansfield office had 3,132 job applications on file Feb. 1, approximately 16 per cent more than in December. More than 700 unemployed workers renewed their requests for jobs last month.

PLAN WORKER RECOGNITION TO SPEED OUTPUT OF U. S. ARMS

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — War production officials have decided on a promotion campaign to speed America's arms output by making workers feel their importance and responsibility in the war.

It was learned that the program awaits only the nod from President Roosevelt and that War Production Director Donald M. Nelson would accept leadership in the campaign.

As tentatively outlined, these are its main features:

1. Special recognition for meritorious performances by individual workers, with emphasis on ideas for production short-cuts instead of on "speed-ups" which would result in fatigue and rejected war materials.

2. Awards to plants turning in notable production jobs, similar to the present navy award of the "E" flag for excellence to ahead-of-schedule shipyards;

3. Trips for foremen and workers to summer army maneuvers to permit them to see the actual operation of the tanks, half-tracks, guns and trucks so that they can visualize field conditions and shape their work accordingly.

4. Reports by commanders at the fighting fronts on exceptional performances of planes, vehicles and weapons in actual combat, these reports would be relayed, with public commendations, to the plants which contributed the material as an incentive to build more and better weapons of the type, and as a standard for competitors to meet.

It was understood the program already has received approval of high labor's suspicion of anything smacking of "speed-up."

PLAN COURSE

Nutrition Council Sets Up Program For County.

Preliminary plans for a course in nutrition class work open to the women of Richland county were made yesterday by the executive board of the Richland Council Council of Nutrition for Defense.

Meeting in the office of Dr. W B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, the council decided to follow the nutrition course outlined by the federal government and made plans for both day and evening classes to accommodate both home and business women.

A corps of nutrition instructors will be organized in the near future, according to Mrs. W. B. Ford, council chairman, and teachers for the various classes will be drawn from this group.

The course of action will be mapped out at an early date, Mrs. Ford said, so that women may receive assistance in their nutrition problems.

R. G. Clarke, manager of the Mansfield Western Union office, today cleared up a point that's been puzzling a number of Mansfield folks with sons in the military services Families of service men have been receiving cablegrams with "Sans Origine" shown as the point of origin. Parents who believe their sons are in Iceland or northern Ireland have been asking whether that expression is Icelandic or Gaelic. Clarke explained that the words 'Sans Origine" provide no clue as to whereabouts of the sender, that it's French phrase for "without origin." It is used on cables to prevent information on location of troops from falling into enemy hands.

Those from Ashland county are James Redic, forgery, April 1; and Dwight Stofer, forgery, April 1.

AUTHOR, WIFE DIE TOGETHER

Jewish Writer And Mate, Banned From Austria, Take Lives.

PETROLOIS, Brazil—(AP)—Stefan Zweig, 60-year-old Jewish author who fled his native Austria after the Nazi invasion in 1938, and his 33-year-old second wife were found dead in their home here yesterday. Police termed the deaths suicide and said the couple was found in each others' arms amid scattered manuscripts upon which Zweig had been working.

His works, which included "Conqueror of the Seas," the story of Magellan and biographies of Mary Queen of Scots, were banned in Austria after the German invasion.

DANCE TONIGHT

SALVAGE SHIP AT SCENE OF OHIO DISASTER

Will Try to Recover Bodies of 16 Killed and Raise Wreckage of Vessel.

(By International News Service)

NEWPORT, Ky.—Three federal agencies today joined in an investigation to determine why the river towboat G. W. McBride smashed into a bridge pier Sunday and sank with a loss of 16 lives only a month after maritime inspectors had given it "a clean bill of health."

Meanwhile, a government salvage vessel was en route from Pittsburgh to raise the wreck and recover bodies which divers have been unable to find because of the swift Ohio river current.

The government's official probe got under way yesterday when four men who were on the boat testified at a preliminary hearing before B. I. Pattison and Harry Flesher, of the steamboat inspection bureau.

The witnesses were John W. Cain of North Kenova, O.; Robert Lowe of Huntington, W. Va., and Ernest Easter and George Harrison of Buena Vista, O. Lowe had left the craft just before the crash, but the others were aboard at the time. They told how the McBride swung in the current and struck, amidships, against a stone pier of the Louisville and Nashville railroad bridge before it turned over and sank.

After the hearing, Captain Pattison said the information would be turned over to a board of inquiry to be named by Commander R. S. Field, director of the steamboat inspection bureau at Washington. This board, it was said, would represent the steamboat inspection service bureau, the FBI and the Coast Guard, all three of which will have a part in making the findings.

According to Charles Dorrance, president of the West Virginia Coal and Coke company, owners of the boat, it was inspected Jan. 20 and found in need of some repairs. These were made and steamboat inspectors gave the craft a clean bill of health.

The McBride, Dorrance said, had a replacement value of $100,000 but was insured for only $45,000. The government will take the salvage value under maritime law.

Two Argentinian Duellists Wounded In 'Honor' Battle

BUENOS AIRES—(U.P.)—A duel between Raul Damonte Taborda, chairman of the Argentine equivalent of the Dies committee, and Enrique Rottjer, former lieutenant colonel in the army, ended today with both participants wounded.

Rottjer, who had complained that Taborda had insulted him in a speech, suffered a wound in his right hand in the first round.

In the second round, Taborda was wounded in the right shoulder.

The duel was fought at the home of the late Natalio Botano, father-in-law of Taborda.

The duellists left the field unreconciled.

Enemy Attacks During Speech

WHILE President Roosevelt was speaking last night the first attack by outside enemies was made on the continental United States.

Apparently timed to coincide with the president's world-wide broadcast of an up-to-the-minute summary of war conditions, prospects and intentions, the enemy attack on the West coast seemed more like a gesture of contempt than an actual effort to do any considerable damage.

The mere fact, however, that shells from a Japanese submarine reached an oil refinery near Santa Barbara, may be taken as convincing proof that the war is no longer thousands of miles away, but actually at the West and East coasts—with likelihood of surprise attacks on this continent and hemisphere at any time.

The president's talk was obviously designed to knit the people of the United States closer together in thought and action in the all-out war effort to which the nation is now dedicated—with reassurance throughout that the United Nations will achieve final complete victory over the Axis powers.

The president's call for "uninterrupted production" of war materials was a strongly emphasized part of his address, as was also his arraignment of those in America who indulge in defeatist talk and rumor spreading.

The "three high purposes" which the president presented as a pledge for all Americans, deserve a place of permanency in suggesting rules of conduct for every loyal citizen while the nation is at war. They are:

"1. We shall not stop work for a single day. If any dispute arises we shall keep on working while the dispute is solved by mediation, conciliation or arbitration—until the war is won.

"2. We shall not demand special gains or special privileges or advantages for any one group or occupation.

"3. We shall give up conveniences and modify the routine of our lives if our country asks us to do so. We will do it cheerfully, remembering that the common enemy seeks to destroy every home and every freedom in every part of our land."

Morrow County In Limelight

THIS TIME it is Morrow county, Richland county's next-door neighbor to the southwest, that gets into the national limelight as the "guinea pig" for a "Production Now" experiment which is designed to enlist the support and co-operative effort of every urban and rural resident of the county.

Shop men, farmers, merchants, professional men, housewives—a representative cross section of community life in a typical medium sized Ohio county—met to hear and discuss a "Production Now" idea being developed by Frederick Sweet, former Mt. Gilead resident, now in the Office of Price Administration in Washington.

Without infringing on the functions of the civilian defense committee, it is proposed to organize Morrow county's agricultural and industrial production facilities into a smooth-running segment of the national war machine—so as to make the largest possible contribution to winning the war.

There is to be a census, by townships, of all available farm machinery; a canvass of all farm labor, regular and occasional; a survey of accommodations in homes, for possible housing of refugees from coastal points in the event of air attacks, and other co-operative moves in a comprehensive program of "Production Now"—instead of waiting until next year, or the year after.

An extended article in yesterday's New York Times, captioned "Grass Roots Plan for Victory Wins Typical Rural Community," gives an idea of the widespread attention that will be attracted to the Morrow county experiment, the progress and results of which will be watched with much interest, possibly to the extent of making it a model for adaptation to maximum production needs in other parts of the state and country.

Stern Struggle Ahead, Stalin Warns

SOME disappointment is being felt because Premier Josef Stalin, speaking yesterday on the occasion of the Red army's twenty-fourth anniversary, did not make the great "victory" claims that had been expected.

Instead, he went no further than to warn his people that they still face a hard war, that "the enemy is not yet beaten and a stern struggle is ahead of us."

But, Stalin gave assurance, "We shall throw the enemy from the gates of Leningrad and liberate White Russia, the Ukraine and the Crimea . . . the Red banner will fly everywhere it has flown before."

And, after all, such an attitude is much better—and safer—than any grandiloquent, claim-making speech would be at this time, while much of western Russia is still overrun by the invading hordes of Hitler.

Calm confidence is all right, so long as it is based on knowledge of present and potential strength, but this is no time for bombastic claims that victory has already been achieved—or is near.

All others in the group of nations united against the Axis may well endorse the Stalin view that "the enemy is not yet beaten and a stern struggle is ahead of us."

Stick To Job Until Called

STICK to the job you are doing until your country calls you for service—only do that job a little better." That's the advice of Miss Margaret Bondfield, former British minister of labor.

That's one of the hard things for people to learn. In a time of general excitement, everybody wants to go out and do something spectacular.

But the fellow in the factory who does his own job so carefully that nothing ever has to be altered or sent back to be done over is serving his country well. The woman who does her housework so intelligently that the family is better cared for than ever is serving her country well. So are the children who do their family chores in pleasant teamwork.

The pitcher's wind-up before putting the ball across in this crucial war game is making the United Nations team look bad—for the moment.

There is such a shortage in Washington housing facilities that some government employes are reported sleeping four in a bedlam.

Illusions of Pacifists Shattered

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

REFERENCES to World War I and World War II are deprecated by some few commentators, on the ground that designating wars by number implies acceptance of them as periodically inevitable forever, or on until the world's end, anyway.

There isn't as much of this kind of talk now, though, as there was during World War I. There was a lot of it then, and "Never again" was a regular motto for a matter of years after the end of that particular No. 1 experience. Today there isn't enough pacifism in the atmosphere to speak of. Even the pre-Pearl Harbor isolationists mostly are all-out belligerents at the situation's present stage.

Now, will we have another pacifistic epidemic following experience No. 2, as we did the last time?

I'm inclined to doubt it.

My impression is that critics of war-numbering are right—that the generality of folk are converts to the proposition that vast conflicts are a certainty, about every so often, as long as the earth continues to be inhabited by human beings.

Wars didn't use to have to be numbered. They were numerous, but comparatively local—the Revolutionary war, the War of 1812, the Mexican war, the war between the states (Civil war), the Spanish-American war, the Russo-Japanese war, the Franco-Prussian war, and, farther back, the Wars of the Roses, and centuries of still earlier affairs, indefinitely to so-called civilization's rearward, just as we may have an infinite futurity of them.

Many Were Local.

However, a majority of those past clashes were between a couple of countries only. It was simple enough to speak of the Crimean war, fought in just one little spot on the globe. It's more complicated to mention the Anglo-American-Canadian - Australian - Filipino-Malayan - Chinese - Russian - Dutch East Indian - Japanese-German-Italian war, not counting France and a whole galaxy of temporarily overrun nationalities that will be entitled to notice in the long run. World war II is an easier name to call it by.

But is it going to be possible to establish everlasting peace at the end of it?

That was what was tried before and there was considerable hopefulness that it could be accomplished. This time I don't believe that there's much such hopefulness.

Anyhow, it surely won't be attempted by the same method as the one we and some of the other powers experimented with in the 1920's.

The idea then was all-around disarmament.

Its advocates meant exceedingly well. Their theory was that the nations not only wouldn't but couldn't fight if they hadn't any equipment to fight with.

Knives and Pitchforks.

A very small scattering of statesmen argued that they always would be able to scare up carving knives and pitchforks for warlike purposes, if they felt like fighting—that disarmament wouldn't do the business; that the only correct system was to cure them of the desire to take the warpath.

The odd thing was that the genuine pacifists were the ones who didn't think that disarmament alone would cure them.

They didn't, though, suggest any convincing-sounding alternative remedy for the disease, so the inherently pugnacious outfit administered theirs — the disarmament dose. And look how it's worked!

Man About Manhattan

Pat's Lost Pants

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—This is the sad story of a pair of pants that lost their coat, and they belonged to Pat O'Brien.

That genial Irishman was in New York after a personal appearance in a Boston theater and was even then on his way to Washington for a little unfinished business with the fight against infantile paralysis which he and others of the film colony were conducting in conjunction with the president's birthday.

When I saw him he was standing on the curb talking with Jean Hersholt and he had not a care in the world. I heard him say so. The weather was good. He had had fun in Boston. The Manhattan traffic hummed a well-loved refrain in his ears. And in his pocket was a ticket to Washington.

LIKE many another American, Pat O'Brien was to learn that a man's troubles really get underway when he gets to the national capital.

By schedule he rolled into Washington about 4:30 p. m. At his hotel he made the disconcerting discovery that his dinner jacket had been left in New York. Tails he had aplenty, but, for that night at least, the orders were for jackets.

If you saw Pat O'Brien pouring orders into a telephone when he played the city editor in "Gentlemen of the Press" you will perhaps have some understanding of his agitation as he implored the operator to get him the office of Columbia pictures in New York.

"Now get this," he bawled, when the call came through, "it's my dinner jacket. I gotta have it. It's in my trunk at Grand Central Terminal. Somebody'll have to get over there, and open it, and get it."

Columbia, happy that the star of its latest coinage, "Two Yanks in Trinidad," was doing his bit in the national capital, lost little time in snatching the O'Brien trunk from the clutches of an astonished check-room attendant in Grand Central. This trunk was torn open on the spot, and I imagine hundreds of observers rushing for their trains, would have been amused had they known the tuxedo yanked from its surrounding of shirts, shorts, and so: belonged to one of the reigning cinema actors of the day.

While one Columbia representative remained behind to collect the debris of what had been Mr. O'Brien's well packed wardrobe, another, the jacket clutched tightly, sped to LaGuardia airport, where it was addressed and dispatched to the waiting actor.

It never arrived. Why, I am unable to state. Suffice it that Mr. O'Brien made three other desperate calls to New York, all barren of results.

Then he called the airport. That was barren too.

The ball? Pat O'Brien made it, all right.

He rented a $5 jacket to go with the pants of the suit that cost him $200—and got there.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

President Is Urged to Get Tough In Making Needed Cabinet Shifts

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

(The authors of the Washington Merry-Go-Round have suggested that inasmuch as President Roosevelt once made a great national issue over keeping older men on the supreme court, he should be consistent in regard to age in important public office and accept the resignations of "The Four Old Men," aged around 70, who hold war positions in the cabinet. Here is another article in the series.)

* * *

WASHINGTON—When the long-range history of Franklin Roosevelt is written he will be proved right on his vision, his advance war plans, and his military strategy. But his greatest failing as an executive will be shown to be too much of the milk of human kindness.

The trouble with Roosevelt is that he hates to fire anyone—especially one who has been with him a long time and for whom he has personal affection.

And if there is one great trouble with our national defense today it is that Roosevelt permitted a kindly old gentleman (Claude Swanson) to remain in the office of secretary of the navy until he died at the age of 78; and that he permitted the war department to be bogged down by a midwest isolationist (Harry Woodring) who did not believe in a strong military machine.

Modern armies and navies are not built up overnight—as Hitler has so amply demonstrated—and it was our failure of a half dozen years ago which brings us such tragic losses now.

Roosevelt, of course, kept his own eye on the navy. But the army he allowed to be pulled to pieces in a cat and dog fight between Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, who believed in strong defense, and Secretary of War Woodring, who didn't—all because he was not hard-boiled enough to choose between them.

Fight Over Bombers.

TO ILLUSTRATE what this situation meant to present day defense, Assistant Secretary Johnson in 1940 recommended a long-range bomber program costing $1,400,000,000. Long-range bombers are the weapons for which we have the most urgent need today. Twice the president has doubled the bomber program and demanded increased production, despite which we are still woefully behind.

In 1940, however, Secretary of War Woodring flatly opposed Johnson's bomber program. In fact he opposed it so vigorously that the two men staged a heated personal row in front of the president. Finally, the president asked Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to act as arbiter.

By this time, Johnson had upped his demand and wanted the United States to launch a bomber program of $2,400,000,000. However, Morgenthau scaled it down to around $200,000,000, and actually write a memo to the state department suggesting that in view of the conflict between the secretary of war and the assistant secretary, the bomber program should be in other hands—those of the treasury department.

At times Woodring and Johnson, with offices down different directions of the war department corridor, were scarcely on speaking terms. Yet Roosevelt would not intervene.

Thus the army dragged along during one of the most important periods of our war preparation, even for a year after Hitler invaded Poland.

It was not until the summer of 1940 that the president finally got tough and appointed a new secretary of war, Henry L. Stimson.

Stimson Housecleans.

MR. STIMSON already had carved out a unique place in American history. He has been secretary of war in the Taft cabinet. He had been governor general of the Philippines under Coolidge. And he was secretary of state under Hoover.

In the latter position he did more than any other man, alive or dead, to block the Japanese in China. He was the only statesman who clearly saw the rampage of conquest on which Japan was bent, and did his best to stop it—and at that time it could have been stopped if Stimson had had the fullest cooperation from every quarter. If there was any one man who did his best to enforce the Kellogg Pact and bring peace to the world, it was Stimson. He came within a hair's breadth of succeeding, but like most far-visioned statesmen, Stimson was ahead of his time.

Today, as secretary of war, Stimson has done a far better job than most people give him credit for. He was the man who urged the draft act on Roosevelt, even though it came in the middle of an embarrassing presidential campaign. He also has had the wisdom to appoint young, A-1 executives, and to give them full scope. Under him, the army, which was in the doldrums two years ago, has come forward by leaps and bounds. When Stimson came to office the army was so short of gunpowder that restrictions were placed on the firing of salutes by some militia units. But today the army has more powder even than at the end of the last war.

Stimson Can Take It.

ONE of the Merry-Go-Rounders has known Secretary Stimson a long time, dating back to the Coolidge and Hoover administrations. And a few months ago, Mr. Stimson remarked to his then military aide, Colonel Eugene Regnier:

"What's the matter with Drew these days? Is he getting soft? Or is he getting old? He hasn't criticised us lately. That acid pen of his used to do us a lot of good."

Secretary Stimson, it should be noted, is not getting soft. He is 75 years old, of course, and not as strong as he was. He has to conserve his energy, but he is putting every ounce of it into his tough job of secretary of war.

Recently Stimson asked a senate committee not to harass him with questions, that he was worn out, that though he went to bed at 9 o'clock, he couldn't sleep because of worry.

Several times, Mr. Stimson has indicated to the president that it might be best for him to step out in favor of a younger man. He was a little reluctant to take the appointment when it was offered to him in the first place. But the president insisted, and Stimson until the end will be a "good soldier."

But much as his wholesome influence will be missed in Washington, we think Mr. Stimson will increase his already great stature if he paves the way for other badly needed cabinet departures and insists that the president accept his resignation.

(Another in the series on "The Four Old Men" will follow soon.)

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—With all the controversy and criticism over dancers, movie actors, unnecessary frills and what-not in the Office of Civilian Defense, very little has been written about the Civil Air Patrol, but it's at least one division of OCD that is sailing along toward effectivs organization.

More than 24,000 pilots, from students who hug the wheel of a flying jalopy on up to graybeards who got their start in the old crates of pre-World War I days and now can walk a four-motored transport through a hurricane, have enlisted in CAP. Nearly 17,500 have been certified by Washington and now are active in this service which includes everything from disaster relief to patrol and messenger duties for the armed forces.

THE Texas wing of CAP has a flying ambulance. In Seattle, one enlistee is a parachute surgeon who can land with a folding operating table and all the necessary surgical instruments for emergency operations. He has two trained assistants who can hit the ground just as quickly as he does.

One recent step taken by the national organization is the installation of punch-card index system and a "mechanical brain." Previously, demands on the CAP were sufficiently localized that wing and group commanders could fill requests from personal knowledge of the abilities of pilots under their direction. Now, the organization and the services it performs have outgrown that system.

SUPPOSE there was a hurry-up call for a man who could pilot a two-motor plane, fly blind over coastal areas, speak Dutch and manipulate an aerial camera. CAP officials here would feed the personnel cards into the "mechanical brain" which sorts them at the rate of 400 a minute. In no time at all, they would have a handful of cards for the pilots with those accomplishments, select the one nearest the point of request and have him on the way to his assignment within an hour.

No organization, however, is perfect. CAP is at the moment having its own little storm of internal strife. The momentous question is whether the CAP women's uniform shall be slacks or a culotte.

A leader of the slack faction says: "Slacks are more practical and less incumbering to girls climbing in and out of planes and wearing parachutes. Slacks and jodhpurs have always been the costumes of women flyers."

One of the culotte backers says: "Most girls look horrible in slacks, unless they are Powers models. Why not at least include culottes as optional."

Acting Supply Officer Harry R. Playford is perplexed. He'll be happy to pass the buck to any one who wants it.

A Farmer's Diary

A Dogwood Tree

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I STOOD beneath a dwarfish dogwood tree that grows near the border of the woods, and looked at the amazing buds. Each terminal branch had buttons on slender stems about two inches long. I pulled one off. It seemed frail and soft and the outer bark of the stem was reddish brown. When I observed a stubby spray from a distance, the gray-green buttons appeared like tempting fruit. Each one looked upward to the sun.

I watched them wave and lift upon the breeze and felt honored in such gay society. The zero cold of two weeks ago had not scarred a single noble little head. Instead, today the tender bracts that pressed so faithfully down upon the inner treasure, contained, on the inside, a whitish powder. Beyond these was a second enfolding of tenderer and softer leaves, but of greater thickness.

The little knobs were some larger in circumference than the head of a spike, but not as flat. I pulled another from its leathery stem and rolled it in my hand. As I opened both coverings of this one, the powdery whiteness was dusted over the many small divisions. I touched these with my tongue. The soft, delicate inside felt cool and had a sticky bitter flavor that reminded me of early springtime when all forest buds are bursting. I placed my two thumbs on its surface and pressed the small divisioned top apart. The tiny stems beneath were each enclosed within a delicate, white fibrous covering. They were blanched like creamy celery hearts, but fine grained and pliable.

I pushed this embryonic wonder against my nose. Strange robust odors had the sprightly, woodsy pungence of the dogwood.

In all those many buds that nodded before me are the frail beginnings of the lovely ornamental blooms that accent every woodland slope in mid-May. Within those buds are ovaries, stigma, style and rudimentary pollen grains.

Beneath some leaves I raked away, I saw small seeds with vestiges of a ragged covering that four months ago was brilliant scarlet. They were swollen, ready for sprouting.

Nature plans her cycle well. Before the ripened fruit is harvested—by birds, and winds and force of gravity—she starts again.

EILEEN HAMMETT IS BRIDE AT LUCAS OPEN CHURCH CEREMONY

LUCAS—In one of the prettiest weddings ever solemnized in this community Miss Eileen Hammett, of Lucas, became the bride of Harry A. Boyd, of Mansfield, at two o'clock Sunday afternoon in an "open church" ceremony in St. Paul's Lutheran church in Lucas.

Rev. O. S Goerner, pastor of the church read the double ring Lutheran marriage service in the presence of a congregation of more than 200 Palms, ferns and bouquets of flowers decorated the chancel for the occasion

Preceding the service Miss Esther Barnett presided at the organ in a fifteen minute prelude of nuptial music which included "O Promise Me," "Indian Love Call," "At Dawning" and "Intermezzo." For the entry of the wedding party she played the Lohengrin "Bridal Chorus."

During the ceremony Miss Barnett played softly "Beautiful Saviour," "I Love You Truly," and "Calm as Night" The bridal party retired from the church to the strains of the traditional Mendelssohn "Wedding March"

Attending the bridal couple were Mrs Marietta Hammett, of Lucas, sister-in-law of the bride, and Joseph Boyd, of Chicago, brother of the groom. The ushers included Wayne and Billy Hammet, of Lucas, brothers of the bride, and James Boyd, of Cosgrove, Pa., brother of the groom.

For her wedding the bride was attired in a princess style gown of white taffeta She wore a full length bridal veil and her only jewelry was a string of pearls She carried a bouquet of gardenias and white carnations

Mrs Hammett wore blue taffeta and carried a bouquet of pink carnations

The bride's mother appeared in a flowered silk jersey dress with black accessories The groom's mother was attired in light blue Both wore corsages of yellow rosebuds

Immediately following the wedding ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs Merle Nichols, in Lucas for about 35 members of the bridal party and immediate relatives

Later in the afternoon Mr and Mrs Boyd left for a wedding trip by motor.

The bride, who is a popular leader in church and club activities among Lucas young women, graduated from Lucas high school in 1938 She has been employed in the Mansfield office of the National Masonic Insurance company.

The groom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs Joseph Boyd of Mansfield, is a graduate of the high school at West Grove, Pa., where the family formerly resided. He is employed by the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company in Mansfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd will reside in the Washington apartments on Bowman street in Mansfield.

Guests at the wedding included many from Mansfield, Chicago, various points in Pennsylvania and other cities in Ohio.

A letter from Walter Ellsberg, Mansfield dramatist, was read by the secretary, Don Richardson, in which Ellsberg offered to give advice and criticism to the players if they so desired.

The play committee has been instructed to select a one-act play which will be cast at the next meeting.

CROWDS ATTEND SHELBY RALLY

City-Wide Patriotic Program Presented at Auditorium; Legion Head Speaks.

SHELBY—One of the largest audiences to turn out for a defense rally here was present Monday night at the city-wide patriotic program given at the high school auditorium in observance of George Washington's birthday anniversary.

Principal speaker for the program was Martin V. Coffey, of Middletown, national officer of the American Legion, who spoke on "Americanism." He was introduced by R. B. Gardner of Mansfield, past state department commander of the Legion, who served as master of ceremonies for the program.

Other speakers were Mayor W. E. Morris and Police Chief Leroy Coffey, who head the Civilian Defense council in this city.

The program closed with a minstrel show given by members of McVey post of American Legion from Mansfield. The rally closed in time so those attending could return to their homes in time to hear President Roosevelt's speech.

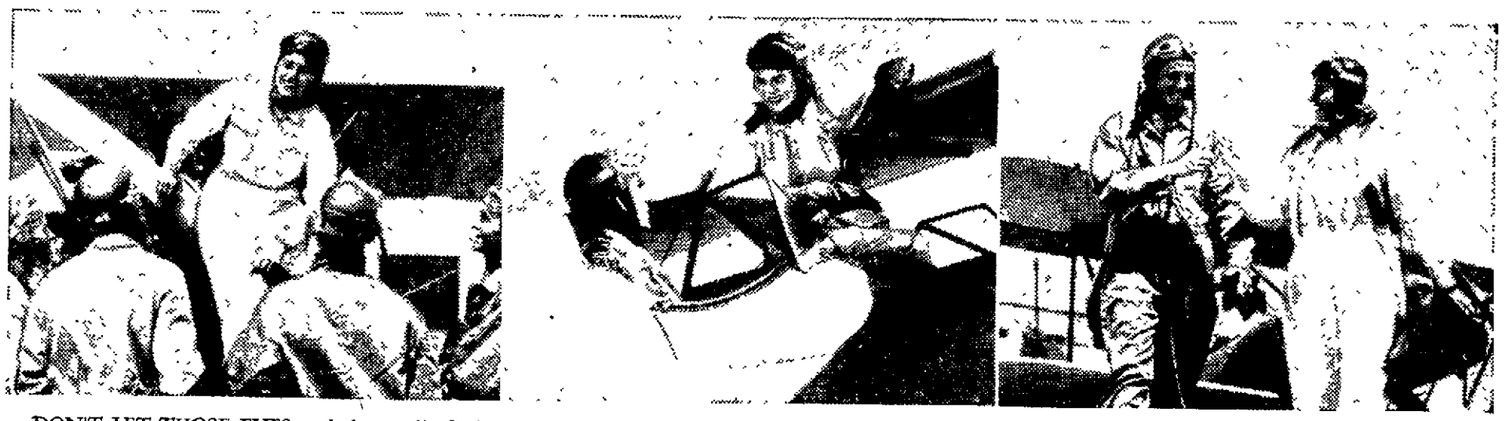
WHAT! A girl training men to fly for Uncle Sam?

● The name is Lennox — Peggy Lennox. She's blonde. She's pretty. She may not look the part of a trainer of fighting men, but —

She is one of the few women pilots qualified to give instruction in the CAA flight training program. And the records at Randolph and Pensacola of the men who learned to fly from Peggy show she's doing a man-sized job of it. She's turned out pilots for the Army . . . for the Navy. Peggy is loyal to both arms of the service. Her only favorite is the favorite in every branch of the service—Camel cigarettes. She says: "They're milder in every way."



DON'T LET THOSE EYES and that smile fool you. When this young lady starts talking airplanes —and what it takes to fly 'em—brother, you'd listen, too . . . just like these students above.

SHE MAY CALL YOU by your first name now and then, but when she calls you up for that final "check flight," you'd better know your loops. It's strictly regulation with her.

YES, and with Instructor Peggy Lennox, it's strictly Camels, too — the flier's favorite. "Mildness is a rule with me," she explains. "That means Camels. There's less nicotine in the smoke."

Flying instructor PEGGY LENNOX says:

● "EXTRA MILD," says Instructor Peggy Lennox. "Less nicotine in the smoke," adds the student, as they talk it over —over Camels in the pilot room at right.

Yes, but that alone doesn't tell you why, with smokers in the service . . . in private life . . . Camels are preferred.

No, there's something more. Call it flavor, call it pleasure, or what you will, you'll find it only in Camels.

The smoke of slower-burning Camels contains than the average of the 4 other largest-selling cigarettes tested—less than any of them—according to independent scientific tests of the smoke itself!

28% LESS NICOTINE

● BY BURNING 25% SLOWER than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested — slower than any of them — Camels also give you a smoking plus equal, on the average, to 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

MANSFIELD SOROSIS GIVES GUEST PARTY

Traditional Observance of Washington's Birthday at Purdy Home; Interesting Program Presented.

IN KEEPING with one of the many traditions which have played an important part in the Mansfield Sorosis club's 55-year history, that organization held its annual Washington's birthday and guest party Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. W. Purdy, 408 Park avenue west. Associate hostesses were Mrs. O. G. Place, Mrs. L. R. McGinty, Miss Mollie Rhodes, Mrs. W. H. Gifford, Mrs. F. W. Bloor and Miss Sophie Ruess.

Mrs. McGinty opened the program with interesting remarks in which she stressed the importance of tradition in the club's activities. From the diary of her cousin, Miss Lillian Wise, who was a charter member of the club, Mrs. McGinty read a sketch about the organization of the Mansfield Sorosis by the social committee of the Mansfield Senior High School Alumni association. Description of the first Washington's birthday party to be recorded, in 1895, also was read by Mrs. McGinty. Charter members in attendance yesterday were Mrs. Bertha Ruess, still active in the club's affairs, and Mrs. Ferdinand Fox, of Cleveland, who retained her local membership until she had belonged for 50 years.

Five young men from the Mansfield Senior high school impressed their audience with inspirational talks on the meaning of the words to "America." Introductory remarks were made by Ralph Stanton. Others who analyzed various phases of the patriotic hymn were Bruce Graves, William Dietrichson, Robert Winbigler and Parker Long.

Musical numbers which were greatly enjoyed were presented by Mrs. Louis Freundlich and Mrs. Claude F. Ewing. Mrs. Freundlich played as piano solos, "Valse Allemayne," by Rubinstein, and "Emperor Waltz," by Johann Strauss. Mrs. Ewing's songs were "The Spirit Flower," by Campbell-Tipton, "The Second Minuet," by Belsy, and "Love's Old Sweet Song," by Mollay. Her accompaniment was furnished by Mrs. Freundlich.

Another of the Sorosis traditions, that of having a spiritual contribution to each program, consisting of an interesting and inspiring address by Rev. H. W. Peterson, district superintendent for the Methodist church. Rev. Peterson reminded his audience that all did not go so well in the days of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. But that Americans had survived under conditions that were even worse than those that exist today. In conclusion, Rev. Peterson urged everyone, in moments of discouragement, to think of those difficult times in the nation's history; then "remember the imperishable destiny of America."

Luncheon was served buffet style from a beautifully decorated table. Centerpiece was a lovely arrangements of lighted red, white and blue tapers, intermingled with white carnations. Mrs. S D. Hoover, president of Sorosis, presided at the table. Out of town guests at the party were Mrs. William Bucy of Killbucy and Mrs. Carl McNeill of Akron.

Victorian Club Hears Talk At Meeting Monday

Dr. Adda Liffring gave an interesting and informative talk on "Racial Groups and Communities in Ohio" at the meeting of the Victorian club held Monday afternoon at the Women's Club. Dr. Liffring told the group that the first two villages in Ohio were founded by people of the Moravian faith in 1772. Both these villages were completely destroyed during the Indian war. The Moravians tried to convert rather than antagonize the Indians.

The story of the French 500 who settled at Gallipolis in 1790 was colorful and is a popular legend of this day. French artisans, discouraged with uprisings in France, sold the things they owned and purchased deeds for land in this county which in time proved nearly worthless. They then set out for a Utopia in the west and were only defeated by a stern and hazard-filled wildernes. Most of them perished from starvation and disease. Congress, after hearing of their plight, set off a territory of land in Scioto county known as the French Grant.

Dr. Liffring also described the origin of many other communities often founded by prophetic men anxious to conquer for God a kingdom in Ohio. At Kirtland in Lake county stands a Mormon temple, and near Lebanon stands a line of barracks, all that is left of a Shaker community once known as Union Village. Zor, in Tuscarawas county, has left behind a pleasing village with an old world atmosphere. This was a community ruled by a powerful leader. Joseph Baumeler.

Ohioans are proud of their Amish residents, whose forefathers came from Switzerland and Germany and settled in various parts of the state. They are known as a settlement of people who have not abandoned old world customs and can be seen riding in and around Plain City in the eastern part of the state in horse-drawn buggies.

Mrs. Oliver Henkel was hostess for the tea which was served from a long table attractively decorated with pastel flowers. The next regular meeting will be held March 9 at which time Mrs. Roscoe Gage will entertain the club in the Park Avenue Baptist church.

Society Enjoys Dinner Monday; Presents Gifts

When Delta Kappa Gamma society members met for dinner last evening at the home of Mrs. Ambrose Middleton, 611 Park avenue west, they discussed plans for a tea to be given Sunday afternoon, April 25, at the Women's Club. Guest for the occasion will be Miss Edna Morgan, state president.

The dinner table was attractively decorated with red, white and blue appointments. Associate hostesses for the party were Emily Palmer, Florence Robison, Leona Snyder, Anita Strauch and Margaret Wheeler.

Mrs. Ruth Fenner Underhill, a recent bride, was presented with a three tier wedding cake and a gift of linen from the group. A similar gift was sent to Mrs. Winifred Black Reichert, now of San Antonio, Tex., who also was married recently.

During the evening, games and contests were enjoyed. Recipients of prizes were Ava Pettit, Helen Myers, Mrs. Underhill, and Gladys McDonald.

The president, Helen Hartman, conducted the business session. Next meeting will be held at the home of Miss McDonald in Lexington, with Miss Pettit, Leona Miles, Vera Southwick and Clara Patton as associate hostesses.

Child Guidance Club Hears Talks On School Art

Hostess to the Child Guidance club at her home, 606 South Main street, last evening was Mrs. Robert DeHaven. Mrs. Floyd O'Brien was associate hostess. Guest speaker for the prorgam was Miss Helen Herring, art teacher at Johnny Appleseed Junior high school. Her subject was "Art In the Schools." She discussed the manifestations of art at the different age levels of children.

Two of the members presented interesting papers. Mrs William Linton spoke on "Pictures That Appeal to Children at Different Age Levels." "Art in the Public Schools" was discussed by Mrs Bart Haley. Luncheon was served by the hostesses. Next meeting will be in the form of a covered-dish dinner at 6:30 p. m. on March 9 at the Y. M C. A. Husbands of members will be guests.

Legion Women Have Program, Tell Of Plans

Announcement was made at the meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary at the Legion home last night of plans for the spring conference which will be held at the Central Methodist church on April 1. Mrs. V. G. Castor presided for the business session.

For the interesting program, Mrs. Louise Reese gave a talk on "The March of Dimes," stating that the fight against infantile paralysis is being waged not just one day a year, but all 365 days.

Accompanied by Mrs. Elsie Ireland, Mrs. Emory Smith sang "George Washington" and "Long, Long Ago," and "God Bless America." Mrs. Harry Ackerman, state secretary of the Ohio Society of D. A. R, gave an address on "Americanism." A talk on "National Defense" was given by R. B. Gardner, past department commander of the American Legion. Luncheon was served in the dining room.

This Home-Mixed Cough Relief Is Hard To Beat

Very Easy to Make. No Cooking. Saves Big Money.

No matter what you've been using for coughs due to colds, you'll be the first to admit that this surprising relief, mixed in your own kitchen, can't be surpassed, for real results.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved No cooking is needed—a child could do it

Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of really amazing cough relief—about four times as much for your money. Tastes fine—children love it—and it never spoils.

You can feel this home mixture taking right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Eases soreness and difficult breathing, and lets you sleep. Once tried, you'll swear by it.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients in concentrated form a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial membranes. Just try it, and if not satisfied, your money will be refunded.

Pity Poor Foundation For Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"I'm 20 years old and a high school graduate. I took a business course, and have a pretty good job.

"A short time ago I was asked, with a group of other girls to go to a certain Army post, to dance with the soldiers. There I met a young man who was born in this country but whose family came from Middle Europe. He seemed so terribly anxious to be regarded as a loyal American that I felt sorry for him. There isn't space to relate his family history, but between his family and his feelings of loyalty to this country he's had a pretty tough time of it.

"It was just feeling sorry for him that made me drift into this engagement and promise to be his wife. But the truth is I don't love him and never can love him. We have an entirely different background. My family are professional people and I hope to make something of myself too.

"On the other hand, my fiance seems to lack ambition. He did not finish high school and speaks pretty poor English. Several times I have suggested to him that he brush up on his grammar by studying books on the subject. This would make him more contented as he seems to feel his disadvantages in comparison with other young men.

"I hate to add to his troubles by breaking our engagement. Yet, at the same time I'm convinced that if we were married I could not make him happy any more than he could make me happy. His ideas that women are inferior and should have no ambition outside the home make me angry—and yet I'm so sorry for him. With it all, he has a good deal of attraction for me, even though we are miles apart in our way of looking at things.

"FRANCES"

While we have been assured that "pity is akin to love," it's a mighty poor substitute for the real article and wears thin as the years move on. A marriage with nothing but pity to recommend it is doomed from the beginning.

Your fiance lacks ambition. While I have sympathy with a man in his circumstances, he should be able to hold up his head and live down that demoralizing feeling of inferiority. He was born in this country; he is an American citizen and is in the United States army. Scores of men with exactly the same background as this young man have risen high on the honor roll of this country.

He has every chance to make something of himself, and yet he has not even taken advantage of every American boy's right to accept a high school education.

The keystone of a happy marriage is congeniality. For a woman of your background, marriage to this man would be an unhappy mistake. I hope for his sake as well as your own that you will not go on with this engagement.

High Style Fashions, Fancy Work

You, too, can look several pounds thinner if you wear the right frock! Pattern 9998 is definitely right on the matronly figure, because of the V neck and soft gathers along the bodice seam, and the ocntinued vertical emphasis of the twin skirt panels. Darts at the shoulders control the bodice fullness—the longer jacket, optional in contrast, would conceal a large waistline. Choose a "camouflage print" of budding leaves—add a posy on the jacket and you'll look simply, smartly, appropriately dressed for any hour of the day! Two sleeve lengths are optional on the dress—short or three-quarter length. On the jacket the sleeves may be three-quarter or long.

Pattern 9998 may be ordered only in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36, dress requires 3⅛ yards 39 inch fabric.

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

The only indication that my father was tremendously wrought up over the situation involving Stephen Redfield was the swiftness and tenseness of his demand for information concerning the actor's reaction to my efforts to mitigate his resentment against Mary.

But that departure from his norm of iron composure was enough for me. I knew that I must answer him in kind, "put the news into the first paragraph," and wait my father's questioning for the details which I was so anxious to give him.

"Redfield is perfectly tractable," I said. "He does not appear to have any grudge against Mary, now, and he has made plans to take her and Olina to one of the glamor restaurants for dinner tomorrow night, if Mary can go."

My father relaxed into a chair opposite me.

"She must go," he said tersely. Then he gave me one of his rare smiles.

Congratulated by Father.

"First Mary, then Noel, then Redfield," he said. "Quite a list of achievements. You are to be congratulated. And you mentioned Olina also."

He settled his body against the chair cushions, and looked speculatively at me.

"I think I should like to hear every step of your procedure," he said.

"I should love to give it to you," I said, "but I warn you that it is a long story. Have you time to hear it all?"

Behind my uttered question was a mental one, which dealt with Ronald. I knew the terrible stress under which the boy who loved Marion so sincerely was laboring, and wondered if it were wise for him to be left so long alone.

Both my spoken query, and its unspoken corollary were speedily answered.

"As it happens, I have sufficient time just now to hear everything you may have to tell me," he said. "Ronald was so excited and so fatigued—really near nervous exhaustion—when he arrived, that I finally persuaded him to take a sedative, telling him that you would not be back until night anyway, that there was absolutely nothing for him to do in the interim, and that he needed sleep in order to help me later in the investigation of Marion's disappearance.

"As a matter of fact," my father went on, "he was asleep when you called just now, but I was careful not to say your name, fearing that the sound of it might reach down into his sub-consciousness and awaken him. He appears to look upon you as his closest link with Marion."

"Poor boy!" I sighted.

"Yes, he is in a pitiable state," my father said, "but this rest will do him a world of good, and when he wakens I shall have figured out some task, ostensibly connected with the search for Marion, which will occupy his mind until I can plan real work for him to do."

"Saga of a Conquest."

His glance at me held something quizzical in it.

"Now if you will begin your saga of conquest," he said, "I will listen attentively and try not to interrupt you."

I could not help an embarrassed flush, but I was able to keep my voice steady as I told of Olina's concern for Mary and of my enlisting her in the cause of cozening Redfield.

"I had no chance to appeal to you." I explained, "so I had to use my own judgment about relaying to her the information we have gleaned concerning Redfield. But I am sure she will be discreet."

Madge's Success Story.

"It was the only thing to do," he said, and made no other comment until I had finished my account of my interview with Redfield, and the way in which Olina had co-operated with me in getting the actor to make an appointment for a rendezvous with herself and Mary.

"Then that is all settled, thanks to you," he said. "Now it will not be necessary for me to see Mary before she sees Redfield tonight, but I do wish to see both her and Olina before they go to dinner with him. This is vital, and I know the arrangement for my interview with them can be left in your hands."

Keeping Up Children's Morale

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

Through newspapers and radio we have been given frequent advice on how best to keep alive during a raid. We need also to consider seriously our conduct then toward children, especially toward young children and runabouts. We need to prepare ourselves now for wise behavior toward children in case such emergencies arise. We need also to prepare the children.

Once we and the children have scampered to comparative safety and are huddled for one or several hours, till the all-clear signal is given, how should we act? What should we talk about?

If our native impulses are allowed to prompt us then, we will incline to dwell, especially in the dark, on the horrible, and to imagine and talk about all sorts of morbid matters. Let us prepare right now for what we will talk about, and prepare our children to share in wholesome conversation.

In case we have read to the tot daily from the time he was two or so, he will doubtless be delighted to have us talk about familiar stories, letting him prompt us when we falter on details. He might, indeed, prefer to tell the stories himself, or create his own about the heroes and heroines of those stories, or tell some of his happy experiences of the day.

The tot will be more inclined to do that if in normal times we have often enjoyed hearing him talk about such things and create such yarns; if we have been accustomed to play the parts he assigned to us in his little dramas. Nothing so valuable as a good imagination in the parents.

If we have a phonograph we could use it in the dark to play records of a quieting and satisfying nature. See also of what value harmonicas might be at such a time. How fine, also, to sing together in the dark. Such simple group songs as a round—"Three Blind Mice," for example, or, "Old McDonald Had a Farm,"—could afford a lot of fun.

As you know, the British had a way of training their tots in nursery groups, while scampering to shelter during air raids, to shout gleefully, clap their hands and sing rhythmic tunes.

Suppose we have made it a family practice to have good times at the dinner hour, when children and parents have told of their experiences that day, especially the amusing ones, or played word games, see what a wealth of resources for amusement this family would have if huddled together during a blackout. Every family might well prepare right now for such emergencies.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, February 25.

Excellent auguries are found in this day's astrological map, for a definite advance on the road to progress, achievement, promotion and successful enterprise. It is a time for forging ahead to high goals, with the promise of cooperation and solid support from influential persons in both business planning, as well as speculative enterprise. Travel, change, litigation, writings, agencies all thrive, but guard against fraud, treachery and intrigue.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of excellent opportunity for reaching high goals of achievement and satisfaction, through sound business policies, professional cleverness and financial strategies in which change and speculation play a part, and superiors, influential persons and trusted friends assist. Be alert to snares or hidden plots from treacherous sources. Young folks are favored and there may be happy change, travel, and success through writings, literary or artistic pursuits.

A child born on this day will have great versatility for success in business, professional, literary or artistic pursuits. It will find high favor and support from those in influential places, but may suffer from imposition.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

HE MUST HAVE PLENTY

Vulnerability may not have much influence on the bidding of most players when they consider opening the auction, but it counts with all of them when they rebid at higher levels after hearing nothing from their partners except passes. Usually then you can count the bidder as probably being able to take a number of tricks within two of the number for which he bid. Consequently, if you wind up as the declarer, it is well to figure him for practically every potential trick-taker his side holds and govern your own plan of action accordingly.

	♠ J 10 6 5 4 2 ♥ A Q 9 ♦ J 4 ♣ 4 2
♠ K 7 ♥ K J 10 4 ♦ A K Q 10 6 ♣ J 5	N. W. E. S.	♠ 9 8 3 ♥ 8 5 3 2 ♦ 9 8 7 2 ♣ Q 3
	♠ A Q ♥ 7 6 ♦ 5 3 ♣ A K 10 9 8 7 6

(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♦	1 ♠	Pass	3 ♣
3 ♦	3 ♠	Pass	5 ♣

Better bidding by South would have been a mere 4-Clubs on his second turn, whereupon North would have bid 4-Spades to show by his bid of the suit that he held at least a six-carder, whereupon South could have passed. That could have been made easily, with the loss of two tricks in diamonds and one in trumps. But the canny bridge artist in the South, who likes to play hands and solve problems, turned the trick in the more difficult club game.

West peeled off two diamond tricks, then tried to make the heart suit hard to read, by leading the 4. The game could have been assured right there by playing the 9, but that was too long a shot to try, so the Q was put in and won, to launch the declarer on his plan, based upon counting West for both missing kings.

Then he ran six clubs, discarding to leave in the dummy two spades and the heart A-9, and in his hand the two spades, heart 7 and his last club. West discarded right, holding his two spades and the heart K-10. But it did him no good when the last club was laid down. If he trashed a spade, the spade A and Q and the heart A would have taken the last three tricks. When he instead discarded the heart 10, the spade A, heart A and heart 9 wound up the hand with a neat backward squeeze.

Tomorrow's Problem.

	♠ 10 3 ♥ A K Q 6 3 ♦ K 9 8 ♣ A 9 5
♠ A Q 8 ♥ 10 8 7 4 ♦ A J 10 4 ♣ K 8	N. W. E. S.	♠ None ♥ J 9 2 ♦ Q 7 6 3 2 ♣ Q J 7 6 4

What bidding would you recommend on this funny deal?

Operative "Pee Wee" of my undercover staff, on special assignment for the nonce in the Toledo university sector, is about to have his staff designation changed to "Pee Ess" whether he likes it or not, and also willy-nilly.

Operative "Pee Wee" (to disclose an unmilitary secret) is none other than Gene "Pee Wee" Lantz of the Marion avenue Lantzes.

And "Pee Wee" is a Past Master of Post Scriptum. Therefore the "Pee Ess." Promotion where promotion is due, I always say. This department is never slow to recognize genuine ability when the evidence thereof is slapped slam-bang in its face.

You think "Pee Wee" isn't a P. M. of P. S.?

You should see the back of the envelope in which he mailed me his latest low-down on the doings of Mansfield boys in the camp of the Toledo Rockets!

All covered over it was with hieroglyphics, and cartoons, and pictures of tombstones, and lists of the deceased, past and future, and slogans, and sign posts and things. And all these things extolled the mighty deeds of the Rockets and bemoaned the fate of their victims.

"Pee Wee" wasn't going to let that missive go through the mail without giving the Rockets a boost with every passing postman.

* * *

That letter-cover signboard must have stirred more than one postman's curiosity as to what in the thus and so went on inside.

Now it can be told.

"Pee Wee" has just discovered a second Mansfield boy playing basketball with the Rockets.

The first, of course, was Gene Miller, who once plunked in 176 points for Mansfield's Tygers.

The second is Jack Berry, first-line sub for the great Bob Gerber, new holder of the all-time Ohio college individual three-season scoring record.

Berry, Operative "Pee Wee" discloses, once attended Carpenter school, and still considers Mansfield as his home.

"Pee Wee" is an operative who will go to any lengths to obtain intelligence for the home office, and I am very happy that he doesn't turn in expense accounts.

Recently he went all the way to Chicago Stadium to see the Rockets edge De Paul 43 to 41 on Gerber's bucket in the last 20 seconds And the Toledo Blade declared Miller was the outstanding star of the game—next to Gerber.

Cagers Start Play For Title

Last Year's Class B Winner Already Beaten.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS — (AP)—Ohio's high school basketball titles in class A and class B will not be decided for a month, but two things were certain today.

One is that a new class B king will be crowned, for the defending Glenford team is out of the running, having been defeated in the opening round of the Perry county tournament—the first step on the long trail to the finals.

* * *

Another certainty was that the new class A ruler—whoever it might be—will have tasted defeat somewhere along the way. That became probable last week when Akron North, Columbus South and Athens fell from the undefeated list, leaving only little Monroe Township of Butler county and Cleveland Glenville unbeaten in the "A" ranks.

Glenville is one of the Cuyahoga county teams which does not compete in the tournaments, so its unbeaten record of 10 straight offers no menace to the title-seeking clubs. And Monroe, in winning 15 in a row, has compiled its record against a conglomeration of A and B squads, the latest being a 27-26 conquest of North College Hill.

Three distinct upsets swept the last of the class A powerhouses out of the clean sector. Akron North, after winning 16 in a row, bowed to Akron Kenmore by 33-24; Columbus South's 12-game streak was halted by Columbus West, 39-28, and Athens, with 12 in a row, was nosed out in an overtime period, 36-35, by Pomeroy.

Martins Ferry, the defending class A champion, piled up 16 in a row, and then dropped its second straight to Tiltonsville last week, while Spring Valley of Green county and Ames-Bern of Athens county, along with Delphos St. John, suffered their second setbacks of the campaign.

* * *

The Spring Valley squad, winner of 21 of 22, lost a 35 to 26 decision to Bellbrook in the county tournament, but is still in the running due to the double elimination system. Ames-Bern has won 20 and lost two, both losses being to Rome of Stewart, the latest 34-32 in the county meet.

* * *

Delphos St. John and Toledo Central went into a Sunday game with records of 20 wins and one defeat, but Central came out on top 55-36.

* * *

With the three big class A teams going out, only nine of the state's 1,156 squads remain unbeaten. They are Lorain Clearview and Middlepoint of Van Wert county with 18, Ridgeway, Bristol and Bremen with 17, New Concord with 16, Brecksville and Monroe with 15, and Cleveland Glenville with 10.

The class B records mean nothing, since practically all the squads will see action in the county tournaments this week and next, all starting from "scratch" in the title chase.

Ohio League In Last Week

Mt. Union, Capital Lead Conference at Trail End.

(By Associated Press)

The Ohio conference, whose brand of baseball is as hot as a Batan defender's gun barrel, swung into its climatic week of play with Kent State's 61-42 victory over Ashland last night.

* * *

Leading all the way, the Kent Staters ran up a 33-32 halftime tally and rushed on to win their seventh game in 16 loop starts. The defeat was Ashland's 13th against a single loop victory. The contest was at Ashland.

* * *

In the only other game placed in Ohio, Rio Grande surprised by defeating Tiffin, 65 to 53, on the latter's floor. At Pittsburgh, Geneva bested Youngstown, 55 to 52.

Interest centered on games tonight for Capital and Mount Union, current loop leaders with 11 victories and one defeat each.

* * *

Capital faced its last chance for the conference crown in its clash with Ohio Northern in Columbus. The Polar Bears have won eight of their 12 league frays.

* * *

Mount Union, however, has two more comparatively easy games to wind up its season but must win both to retain its conference title. The Mounts play tonight at Oberlin, victor in two of its five league tests Kenyon invades Mount Union Friday for the other game. The Gambier lads have a record of four wins and six losses in the circuit.

CONWAY OPTIONED

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Jack Conway, shortstop has been optioned by the Indians to the Baltimore Orioles of the International league.

BUDDY WALKER LOSES FIGHT: FORGOT TO DUCK

BALTIMORE —(AP)— Yep, he forgot to duck.

Buddy Walker, the 197 pounder from Columbus, twice floored Claudio Villar, 210, of Spain, last night and generally pushed him about the ring for nine and a half bruising rounds.

Then the bloodied Spaniard packed all he had behind a looping right that caught Walker flush on the chin midway of the final round. Before Walker could get off the canvas, Referee Charley Short had counted him out.

Club League Tightens Up

Two Top Teams Bumped Off In Loop Matches.

Leaders in the Club bowling league were bumped off last night, and the championship race is now sewed up tighter than a drum. Loop standings show only one game separating consecutive rungs of the ladder.

* * *

Commercial Managers took the league leading American Legion 3-0, and Richman Clothes won over the second-place Schoolmasters 2-1, leaving the Managers and Richman's tied for third, just two games out of first.

* * *

Sherm Wentz made a clean sweep of scoring honors with a 632 total and 248 game, while Mansfield Savings Bank rolled high team total of 2729, and high game of 932.

Garrison turned in a 628 total, Art Hilborn 606, an Ferrell Hipp 604.

Chicago Scratch Hikes Odds On Franklin To Beat Pastor

CLEVELAND—(AP)— Touching off a new skyrocket in the fanciest fistic fireworks Cleveland has enjoyed in 11 years, a rush of "fresh" money hit town today to make Lem Franklin a lop-sided favorite over Bob Pastor for their ten-round brawl tonight.

About the same time Promoter Bob Brickman predicted a sell-out crowd of 14,000 and a gate of some $55,000, to make it the Forest city's biggest punch- party since Max Schmeling and young Stribling held their waltz back in '31. The Chicago boys blew in with large packages of scratch to back Franklin and send the odds sky high.

In contrast to the 5 to 9 price quoted yesterday, the 24-year-old Cleveland kayo specialist was held at 2 to 5 at weigh-in time, and the forecast was that he'd be 1 to 4 or there-abouts when the gun goes off at 10:30 p. m. (EWT) in the spacious Cleveland arena.

Both of the warriors are throwing the dice for sevens tonight because the winner stands a very good chance of tasting the heavy sugar of a major match with Joe Louis, come summer. Incidentally, there was a rumor Joe, himself, was on the premises and would sit in on the proceedings tonight However, no one had actually seen him, and, when last heard from, Soldier Joe was doing a lot of buck-privating out at Camp Upton on Long Island.

The betting odds meant about as much to Pastor as the color of Franklin's socks. The 28-year old New Yorker has never been a favorite in any major fight in his career of some 60 outings. Yet he has done considerably better than a green hand, regardless. He goes to the post tonight riding on a winning streak of ten in a row. Off his most recent job of work, against Gus Lesnevich, the stylish stepper from the east rates no worse than a 6 to 5 shot.

This department tabs Bob to out-fumble Franklin and gallop to a ten-round decision, in spite of Lammin' Lem's record of 19 straight victories.

Safety Cabs Take Top Tie

Also Make Clean Sweep of 'C' League Scoring.

Safety Cabs climbed back into a tie with Buckeye Beers for first place in the Commercial "C" league last night by taking a 3-0 decision over Weber Beers, while the Buckeyes were dropping a 1-2 count to Southern Produce.

C. Need took scoring honors with a 596 total and high game of 231, while P. White rolled a 592 total.

The Cabs made a clean sweep of team honors with a 2506 total, and high game of 878.

Cage Coach Mills Gives Eliot Lesson In Title Ways

By GRAHAM HOVEY

CHICAGO — (INS) — If Ray Eliot's job as football coach at the University of Illinois looks tougher to him now than it did when he was appointed last month it can all be blamed on his boss, Doug Mills.

When Eliot was named to Bob Zuppke's old post, enthusiastic alumni began predicting an early revival of the Illini as a Big Ten conference football power.

They pointed to the fact that Eliot, at 36, was the youngest football coach in the conference with the exception of Ohio State's Paul Brown, and they anticipated that his youthful enthusiasm and energy would be just what the doctor ordered for their ailing grid fortunes.

But Mills, as athletic director, believed that the revival should extend to all branches of the Illinois sports program. He believed the sooner the revival got underway the better. And being only 34, he had some measure of enthusiasm and energy himself.

* * *

So, after taking part in the selection of Eliot, Mills devoted most of his efforts to one of the most inexperienced basketball teams in Illinois athletic history —and coached that team to the Big Ten title; thereby beating Mr. Eliot to the punch, so to speak.

If you want to quibble about it, the Illini had only a share of the championship cinched today, following a 45 to 43 victory over Wisconsin last night, but the greatest optimist at Minnesota, Indiana, Purdue or Iowa could scarcely picture his team catching Mr. Mills' amazing sophomores.

* * *

Aside from the Illinois-Wisconsin battle, the Iowa Hawkeyes put on the best show when they staved off a gallant Indiana rally to edge out the Hoosiers, 55 to 52, at Iowa City. By winning, Iowa moved into a second place tie with the Hoosiers, Minnesota and Purdue's Boilermakers, who trounced Northwestern, 56 to 40. All four teams have won eight of 12 games.

* * *

In the fourth Big Ten game of the evening, Michigan trounced Chicago, 61 to 37, behind the sharpshooting of Center Jim Mandler, who scored 23 points. The win was the fourth in 13 games for the Wolverines and the loss was the 30th straight over three conference seasons for the Maroons.

Appleseed, Simpson Play

Junior Highs Square Off For Second Match.

The second in a two game series of inter-city battles between Mansfield's two junior high school will take up tomorrow at 7 p. m. in the John Simpson gymnasium—and with the Simpsonites again favored.

* * *

Last time the two clubs traded baskets Simpson won, 30 to 20, on the Appleseed court. This time it may be different. After all, it's just a matter of five boys playing five other boys and even the coaches often admit they never know just what the players will do.

* * *

That's why when Coach Bob DeHaven says he thinks his Simpson club should win he qualifies it by saying "if everything goes right and the boys hit the bucket the way they should.

* * *

DeHaven thinks the Apleseed squad has improved which has been proven by their beating teams late in the season they had lost to earlier.

* * *

Simpson will start Mike Zivkoff and Dick DePue at forwards, Roland Schmidt at center, and Jake Gaubatz and Bill Dent at guards. Coach John Thoms at Appleseed said this morning that he would start Chuck Sauder and Bob Hall at forwards, Murray Swihart at center, and Jerry Zeller and Les Meyers at guards.

During the season Simpson has won 10 games and lost four while Appleseed won eight and lost three.

CHAPTER XI

Emily stiffened and her lower lip trembled. "Why don't we know? Why must we wait and guess? Tim can't see me on Christmas. He told me so, apologizing. He'll be with his fine, rich family in their fine house in Connecticut . . . Why don't I stop it, Judith? I'm only kidding myself that he'll marry me.

"I'm a working girl who came out of the middle west, and his family has never heard of me. I don't measure up. And why don't I stop it. Why don't I? Because I'm in love with him and I'll see it through to the end when he tells me, very sweetly and honestly, that we've had a lot of fun together and we do love each other, but that there are such things as family and duty . . . I'm sorry. I'm holding you up."

"You know that Max is always late." Her hand went out and touched Emily's thin shoulder. "We'll talk more about this later. No girl in love ever knows where she's going, Emily. I've learned that, too. You and Phyllis have called me efficient—but I'm not with Max. You can't analyze love, Emily. When you accept it you just have to go along with it. There are some things that people in love share and know about each other, but there are other things they never share and never know."

"You walk down a blind alley and once in a while maybe you see a little patch of light . . . I suppose women always think they're more easily understood than men, more transparent. I don't know, Emily. There's so much I don't know." She smiled. "A girl in love has no perspective."

One place, small and intimate and unheard of by tourists, had seen them often and a certain waiter had come to know them. Judith, slim and erect, the gay feather in her black hat the only spot of color in her all-black outfit, followed Fritz, the portly, florid waiter to a table against the wall.

Presently she faced Max and all other thoughts were swept away in the pure delight of looking at him. Often when she had been thinking of him she had roughly sketched his face, frowning because she could not quite make his nose as straight as it was or his mouth as sensitive or as sensuous, or his chin as sternly square.

In a pencil sketch it was impossible to see the lights in his close-cropped fair hair; impossible, too, to make his eyes as blue, as intense, as knowing as they really were. Nor could a mere sketch speak, enclosing her in a world with only that well-remembered voice.

She felt warm now and loved and loving as she responded to his smile. And she felt lost. Yes, always a little lost and reckless as though she were following him and neither knew nor cared where he was taking her.

Max said, "My darling."

That was always their beginning, Max's words of endearment and their sudden and complete absorption in each other.

"Max."

"You look so good to me," he said, smiling. "And you're such a little girl. Not so young in years—you're 22, aren't you? But a good many girls at 18 are more sophisticated than you, but it's sordid sophistication. You and I have done a lot toward making love beautiful."

He smiled again. "You can always go me one better. Yes, toward keeping it beautiful. You've done that. It's one of the many rare and precious gifts you have, darling."

"You'll turn my head."

"Don't you dare turn your head and break the warm current flowing between us."

"We've never quarreled. I thought people in love had misunderstandings and quarreled."

"We won't let us quarrel." He looked at her soberly before he said, "You're perfect—for me. I can't find anything about you to disapprove of. And you—you never reproach me for being late habitually. You've never made a scene in your life, and I love you for it. And you don't realize and perhaps I shouldn't tell you what a unique specimen of femininity you are because you are a combination of beauty and intelligence and strong feelings . . . Fritz is coming over to take our orders. A tactful, patient waiter is another rare specimen, darling. He lets us have our romantic preliminaries before he suggests anything as prosaic as food. How would you like champagne tonight?"

"Is tonight a special occasion?"

"Any time you and I are together is a special occasion," Max said and looked up at Fritz.

* * *

Fritz had brought their coffee and had gone away again.

"I'd like to stay like this with you for six months," Max said.

"Only six months? I love this place, Max. It's—us. I could never come here if you weren't with me. I don't think I could go to any of the places I've been with you if you weren't with me. It's two weeks before Christmas and it's snowing outside and one girl in the world tonight is terribly happy. There's humility and gratitude as well as great happiness in my love for you, Max."

"I know, darling. And that makes it all the more difficult for me to tell you what I must tell you."

What he must tell her? She couldn't breathe.

He smiled. "It's not that bad! It's simply that my office thinks it is giving me a tremendous break by making it impossible for me to spend Christmas anywhere except in Florida. I won't go into details. It's all very complicated, but I must be in Miami for a few weeks to see a Mr. So-and-So who won't have his suntanning interrupted to make the trip here. I'm counting on your understanding."

"Then you shall have it. When are you going?"

"Tomorrow. I'll write you, of course. It won't be long. So you go home to your devoted family for Christmas and think of desolate Max alone in the sunshine with Mr. So-and-So. Now let me see you smile . . ." And when she couldn't smile, he said with a slight, but unmistakable annoyance, "We can't fight distance, dearest, and I never promised I'd never leave you. I'm much fonder of living than of working, but unfortunately you can't do one without the other. I'm a lazy man with a stern sense of duty."

"I'm sorry if I'm not gallant."

His smile was compassionate. "You are. You fit into my life as neatly as you fit in my arms. Think of the fun of re-union..."

"And champagne for re-union? I'll pretend you haven't gone. But your family, Max."

"They'll save the usual shirts and ties until I get back and I'll save them for you to exchange. I haven't packed yet and I must get it done tonight. At re-union I'll make it up to you for cutting tonight short."

* * *

Outside they hurried through the blinding snow to his car; and when they reached an intersection where the snow had piled high against the curb, Max, without preface, picked her up and carried her across the street.

She laughed quietly; he chuckled and for a moment she forgot that he was going away. Then she thought, "I won't be possessive or tearful or any of the things I could so easily be."

Walking down the hall to her apartment he smiled and said, "In retrospect the sound of my wooden heels won't be as harsh. Your neighbors always know when I call for you and when I bring you home."

"I haven't had any complaints. You know, my mother can't understand one's living so close to people and not knowing them."

"Let me open the door. You're nervous . . . My poor darling."

There was a small light in the foyer where they stood, his arms around her, cold face to cold face quickly warmed by proximity. And suddenly she saw Max look desperately unhappy, a keen, cutting, naked unhappiness that hurt more than his going away. Were his eyes really misty? She couldn't quite see . . . Did he mind that much?

"Judith—" He held her face between his hands and kissed her. And when he spoke, his grave voice shook a little. "Judith doubt everything and everyone, if you must, but never doubt my love."

This was their closest moment, surely, she thought. A moment to catch and hold forever.

"I won't, Max. And I love you. It is the one indestructible thing in my life."

"Don't say anything more. And don't move. Stand there as you are and . . . I'll go."

She stood, scarcely breathing, hearing the sound of his footsteps on the hall outside becoming fainter and fainter until she could hear them no more.

Announcing An END-OF-THE MONTH SALE

In Many Mansfield Stores Beginning Thursday, Feb. 26

This is not just a run-of-the-mine, End-of-the-Month Sale tossed in at the close of the month to bolster business totals in a few stores.

It is an event of unusual character with some exceptional opportunities for buyers. It will serve as a worthy and patriotic effort on the part of sponsoring stores. On these points some words of explanation:

The E. O. M. Sale beginning Thursday morning will unquestionably be your last opportunity in many seasons, perhaps years, to buy certain lines of merchandise, especially in yard goods, apparel and woolens, in preferred qualities and price ranges.

That opportunity will be limited to the depleted size ranges and choices that are now available in the stores. With Easter just six weeks away, the time for displaying winter goods is at an end. But virtually all winter goods today is yet in consumer demand.

Taking the price graphs of the seasons just past as a guide, Mansfield merchants would no doubt be rewarded by price increases to hold over unsold winter goods. Such a move, they feel, would be inconsistent with the patriotic spirit the war situation inspires.

Their feeling, rather, is in normal times we would clear our stocks. This season is no exception. We will get ready for Spring as usual and offer final ends of winter stocks at special low prices!

The E. O. M. Sale will not be a rushing, pushing Bargain Festival, simply because there is not that much merchandise available for sale. Prices are right, the goods are right, but the quantities are limited.

The E. O. M. Sale will be an Opportunity for Good Shoppers, folks who will carefully read the Wednesday News-Journal, note down the advertised items which hold their interest and then on Thursday seek them out in the various stores. For them, the E. O. M. Sale will be great!

Full Announcement of The Stores Holding an E.O.M. Sale Will Appear In Wednesday's News-Journal!

2—Card of Thanks

WITH REGARD TO A CARD OF THANKS

Very often a Card of Thanks in The News-Journal meets a need which can hardly be solved in any other way. Not only is it a gracious expression of gratitude to those who have sent floral tributes, but also courteously acknowledges the service and kindness of the many to whom a personal note of thanks cannot well be mailed, or whose names or addresses are not known.

A "Card of Thanks" can now be arranged by telephone: Dial 4251-6, ask for Miss Lane or Miss Stone, either will be glad to render whatever service and advice you need.

IN THE MIDST of our sorrow we pause to extend our heartfelt thanks and deep gratitude to our many kind friends, neighbors and relatives for their numerous expressions of sympathy and beautiful floral tributes in the loss of our beloved mother, Mary Gump. In particular do we wish to thank Rev. B. F. Hagelbarger for his beautiful sermon Rev. Grover E. Swoyer for his consolence and the Wappner Funeral Home for their efficient service.

PAM—Follow the Leader! By A. W. Brewerton

OKAY, YOUNG LADY, I'LL LEAVE YOU IN THE GOOD HANDS OF BILL ROSS. HE'LL GIVE YOU FURTHER INSTRUCTIONS. HERE ARE YOUR KEYS WE—AH—BORROWED FROM THE OTHER GIRL
2-24
PAM DIDN'T TAKE TO THE APPEARANCE OF "ROSS" AT ALL! HE WAS OLDER THAN WENTWORTH, A BLOND, WITH A PASTY COMPLEXION, A WINTRY EYE AND A SET SMILE.
YOU'LL HAVE TO EXPERIMENT WITH THOSE KEYS—ONE WILL ADMIT YOU TO HIS PRIVATE OFFICE AND LATER YOU CAN...
AS THEY WALKED ON, ROSS GAVE PAM DETAILED INFORMATION AND INSTRUCTIONS—
AS WE NEAR THE BUILDING, I'LL GO ON JUST A LITTLE AHEAD. YOU FOLLOW ME A FEW STEPS BACK! Y'SEE, I'M NOT A—A FRIEND OF MISS WESTON. JUST KNOW HER IN A BUSINESS WAY

FDR REPORT TO NATION BOOSTS STOCK LEADERS

Confident Tone of Speech Revives Speculative Trading Sentiment.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market took a slightly more hopeful view of international affairs today and leading issues moved up fractions to a point or so.

Prominent early forward swingers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, Youngstown Sheet, Western Union, Anaconda, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft and American Telephone.

The confident tone of the president's broadcast, brokers said, helped revive speculative and investment sentiment to a considerable extent. Among cloudy, factors, though, were the Japanese shelling of the California coast, further tanker sinkings in the Atlantic and inconclusive war shifts in the southwest Pacific.

Holders of motor shares noted the new regulations issued by Price Administrator Henderson in which approximately 340,000 new 1942 passenger automobiles now in the hands of dealers and manufacturers will be rationed to essential users over the next 12 months. The regulations go into effect March 2 and it was expected that by May 31 about 140,000 vehicles would be made available to those in the eligible class.

CITY RECORDS 1ST FATALITY

Galion Woman, Hurt In Park Avenue Crash, Was County's 2nd Traffic Victim.

as he attempted to avoid the collision.

Three pedestrians were struck in accidents on Mansfield streets within the last 24 hours. None of the pedestrians received serious injuries.

Mrs. Catherine Parry, 239 North Adams street, suffered cuts about the face and forehead yesterday at 9:15 p. m. when struck by an automobile as she was crossing the street at the intersection of Fifth and Main streets. Police reported that a car driven by Howard Ross, 50, of 270 Superior street, struck Mrs. Parry. They said that his car skidded 27 feet as he attempted to stop.

June Kline, 7, of 101½ West Fourth street, escaped serious injury when she was struck on Park avenue west by an auto operated by L. E. Gray, Mansfield R. D. 3. Gray told police the girl ran in front of his car. She received a slight cut on her nose.

Frederick A. Krusemark, 50, of 51½ Douglas avenue, will be arraigned in municipal court tomorrow on a charge of unsafe operation. Krusemark was the driver of a car which struck A. L. Lee, 53, of 113 Elm street, as he was crossing the street at Walnut and Fourth streets yesterday. Lee was not injured seriously. Police said that the windshield of Krusemark's car had been covered with frost.

Mrs. Crider, Mansfield's first 1942 fatality, died last night at 8 p. m. She and Mr. Crider had been living with their son, Arthur, since their home was destroyed by fire on Jan. 7.

She was born in Minnesota on July 7, 1879 but had resided near Galion for more than 47 years. She was a member of the Presbyterian church at Iberia.

Survivors are her husband, two sons, Arthur of Galion R. D. 2, and Howard of Bucyrus; four grandchildren and three sisters and two brothers, all living in western states.

The body had been removed to the Snyder funeral home in Galion where friends may call. Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. from the Iberia Presbyterian church with Rev. Robert Rushing officiating. Burial will be in Iberia cemetery.

MAYOR MUM ON NEW DIRECTOR

Locke Says He's Given No Thought To Training For Crafton Successor.

mayor's statement, said that he had no intention of signing a resignation and that he would consider appointment of another director as a "discharge."

The service director said that according to law, he would have to remain on duty until a new appointee had been bonded and "duly qualified" for the office.

Locke refused to discuss the discrepancy between statements made by him in which he said that he had "tried to persuade Crafton to change his mind about the resignation" and a later one in which he said that Crafton "could not change his mind."

When asked what would be done if Crafton did not intend to resign, Locke said: "He can't do that."

Reminded that Crafton had made several public statements which had been printed by The News-Journal in which he said that he did not intend to resign, Locke said:

"Well, I don't believe what I read in the newspapers."

Nevertheless, the mayor keeps several scrapbooks on items appearing in The News-Journal and the latest contains clippings of every article about the controversy.

The mayor said that Crafton had not discussed the resignation with him "although we have seen each other every day for weeks."

"Crafton never told me he did not wish to resign," said the mayor.

Crafton said that Locke had never brought the subject up at all and that he, Crafton, had ignored the whole matter because he had never resigned and saw no need for discussing it.

"The mayor knows my views on the matter," said Crafton.

Mayor Locke said that he had received a letter from a Mansfield woman asking that he forget his controversy with Crafton and that he was trying to contact her to get her permission to have the letter made public. The mayor said he had been unable to reach the writer although he had been trying since Saturday. The mayor today said the letter from the woman was the only one he has received concerning the service-safety director dispute.

LEGAL NOTICE

To Lee Connally, Gertrude E. Chambers, and John D. Pfaff, Jr.:

You are hereby notified that on the third day of February, 1942 the Council of the City of Mansfield, State of Ohio, duly passed Resolution No. 42-36 to improve East First Street from Bushnell Street to the Pennsylvania Railroad Industrial track by grading the street to the established grade, graveling the roadway with some suitable material and constructing the necessary storm drainage, etc. in accordance with the plans, profiles, specifications and estimates on file in the Office of the Department of Public Service and that the grade of the street shall be the established grade.

That the cost and expense of said improvement will be assessed by the foot front on the abutting property.

By order of the Council of the City of Mansfield.

ATTEST: R. R. BLACK,
Clerk of Council.

Set Townsend Meet — Rhoena Addis, national Townsend representative, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of local Townsend units tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. in Radio City hall at 64 North Walnut street.

Practice First Aid—Members of the Co-Operative club will continue their study of first aid under the direction of Leroy McGinty today at 6:30 p. m. in the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Cuts Leg—Robert Bucher, 23, of 665 McPherson street suffered a cut on his right leg when he slipped while at work on a slag pile at the Globe Steel company yesterday. He was treated at General hospital.

Injures Face—Charles Barnhill, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Barnhill, Mansfield R. D. 6, fell on a glass jar in his home last night and suffered a cut on the right side of his face. He was treated at General hospital.

Check Auto Fire — Mansfield firemen were called out late yesterday to check a fire in the upholstery of an automobile parked in front of 69 North Diamond street. Firemen said that the auto was owned by J. Barr but they did not obtain his address.

Plan Improvement—City council will be asked to pass legislation authorizing the grading and graveling of East Raleigh avenue at their March meeting next Tuesday, R. R. Black, clerk of council, said today. Black said that legislation for the project had been filed in his office.

Daughter Born—Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Stuff, 21, Swanger avenue, received word of the birth of a daughter born today, to Mr. and Mrs. John A. McFarland of Long Beach, Calif. Mrs. McFarland was the former Miss Mary Stuff of Mansfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Stuff.

Gets $50 Fine—Frank Hart, 47, North Olmsted was fined $50 and costs yesterday by Mayor R. B. Booher in Mt. Gilead after he had pleaded guilty to charges of driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. He had been arrested by state highway patrolmen who filed the charges after issuing the citation Sunday.

Deadline Nears—Fred E. Lingafelter, secretary of the garbage department, reminded Mansfield residents today that tomorrow is the deadline for payments for the collection of garbage during March, April and May. Lingafelter said that persons not paying their bills would be placed on a delinquent list and that service would be stopped on March 1. Only 50 per cent have paid their bills to date, according to Lingafelter.

189 MEN DIE IN NAVAL DISASTER

Destroyer and Freight Ship Run Aground In Storm Off Newfoundland.

Pollux were one officer and 91 men.

Efforts to put lines ashore from the stricken vessels failed. A breeches buoy finally was rigged to a ledge at sea level, but some survivors were washed away before they could be gotten to the top of the cliff that lined the rocky coast.

The Truxtun, the navy said, broke up almost immediately after grounding and soon afterward the Pollux also went to pieces under the pounding of the violent seas.

Such as did survive owe their rescue in large measure, the navy declared, to the "tireless, efficient and in many cases heroic action of the people of St. Lawrence, Newfoundland."
